ORGANIZE TO MEET GREAT INCREASE IN BUSINESS

R. E. Spicer of England Is Now Here to Aid in Directing Business

DR. HENRY R. HARROWER has had the Harrower Laboratory, located at 920 East Broadway, Glendale, incorporated for $525,000 under the laws of Delaware, according to information made public today.

Officers of the corporation will not be named until Dr. Harrower returns to this city from a European tour of six months. He is expected by the first of August. The incorporators, however, are actually Dr. Harrower and R. E. Spicer, recently of London, England, and New York.

Mr. Spicer with his brother E. H. Spicer has been in control of British business for Dr. Harrower during the last two years, the London office being a separate corporation, serving continental Europe, Africa and the Near East, with the Harrower tablets for use by physicians in glandular theapeutics.

Personnel Unchanged

It is stated that in the reorganization the doctor will devote his time to research and writing while Mr. Spicer will handle the business detail with the assistance of James Howarth, business manager, who has known the Spicer family for twenty years. Mr. and Mrs. Spicer and daughter arrived here on June 17 and have taken a home in Pasadena.

The personnel of plant here will remain unchanged and, as Mr.

Search Glacier Region For Missing Athlete

DENVER, July 6.—Two outfits of possemen with bloodhounds are this morning searching the St. Mary's glacier region for William Head, employe of a local jewelry store.

Head with a companion left Denver the first of the week to attend a ski meet now being held on the snow-covered mountain sides of the glacier. Early Wednesday morning he left camp telling his companion he was going for a short walk to take some pictures. Since then he has completely dropped from sight. The region in which Head is believed lost is very rugged, with ice-covered precipices and deep rocky canyons, and it is feared that he fell into one of these and has either been killed or lies seriously injured at the bottom. After an extended absence, eight experienced mountaineers all familiar with that part of the country were called upon to search for the missing man. Their efforts were fruitless.

Conflict In Cabinet Over Proposed Alaskan Policies As President Sails North

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
For International News Service

ABOARD U. S. S. HENDERSON EN ROUTE TO ALASKA WITH PRESIDENT HARDING, July 6.—President Harding is Alaska-bound today with a sharp conflict existing within his cabinet over the policies that should be adopted in governing the vast northern territory. How serious this cabinet division may be remains to be determined, but it prevails and the controversy likely will be the subject of a great many conferences between the president and his cabinet aides who are accompanying him into the far north.

The cabinet split hinges about the control of Alaska. Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, believes that the whole of the territory, equal in area to one-fifth of continental United States, and with its natural resources yet virtually untouched, should be placed under the administrative control of a single department at Washington—preferably the department of the interior.

Would Retain Control

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture does not agree, and there are indications that he will resist strongly any attempts that may be made to take away from his department control of the vast forestry reserves in the territory.

In some respects the controversy is a repercussion of the old Ballinger-Pinchot row over forestry conservation.

More recently the question of which department should control public lands was subject of dispute between Wallace and Albert S. Fall, who resigned as secretary of the interior last March. Fall's retirement temporarily smoothed over the difficulty, but with the advent of President Harding's Alaska trip it has again come to the fore in such a way that it may embarrass Mr. Harding in his attempts to reach a solution of the Alaskan problem.

"Control of Alaska is now vested in thirty-five separate departments and bureaus in Washington," Secretary Work told International News Service today. "I do not think there is any question but that this division of authority with its inevitable delay and red tape is responsible for the backwardness of the territory in commercial and agricultural developments.

Favors One Department

"I favor putting control of Alaska, and when I say control I mean everything from trees to bears, under one department—if not under the interior, then under some other department. The present system is intolerable and cannot continue.

"There must be one central authority over the territory so that when a settler or a miner or a pioneer wants to obtain an opportunity to help develop the territory he can do so expeditiously and without going through thirty-five different bureaus in Washington.

"My own opinion is that this control should be vested in the interior department for the reason that it is the great holding company, so to speak, for government lands."

Secretary Work said he did not go so far as did Secretary Fall in desiring to extend his department's control over all forests. He feels that the forests of continental United States should be left under control of the agricultural department, but he is in favor of taking away the Alaska reserves. It is his idea to set up a colonial governor in the department who would be the central authority on all administrative matters of the

Harding's Ship Is Protected By Two Destroyers

ABOARD U. S. S. HENDERSON, EN ROUTE TO ALASKA WITH President Harding, July 6.—President Harding was in foreign waters today. The Henderson was steaming off the Canadian coast, crossing the line during the night. The transport is escorted by two destroyers, the Hull and the Corry, both of which are equipped with sonic depth finders, the newest navy wrinkle in depth finding. Depth is measured by sound. A company of marines is aboard as a special presidential guard.

The president is greatly enjoying the rest from crowds and speech-making and spends considerable of the time on deck with his pipe. After leaving Tacoma, the whole party shivered in overcoats on deck last night—a delightful experience after two weeks of sweating in Pullmans.

NEW REVOLUTION FEARED IN SPAIN

Premier Removes Head of War Council When Defi Is Hurled at Cabinet

LONDON, July 6.—The Spanish premier today ordered General Aguilera removed as head of the supreme war council, according to a dispatch from Madrid. The action followed a clash in the senate last night when Aguilera defied the government to remove him and criticized it for "failure to prosecute those who have failed in their duty." Rumors of a coup by the Aguilera faction had been spread about.

The prime minister, in ordering Aguilera's removal, declared that threats made against the government "could be carried out only over the dead bodies of the members of the cabinet."

Political Agitation

MADRID, July 6.—General Aguilera, military leader, loomed today as the Spanish "Musselman" leader, as rumor filled the city that a Fascisti coup was imminent. The air is full of political agitation and the military party has spread propaganda against the government throughout Spain.

Aims of the Aguilera forces, which are believed to have the support of the army, are to crush the Socialists and punish those believed responsible for the Morocco disasters.

Tin Workers Benefit From Wage Increase

NEWCASTLE, Pa., July 6.—A wage increase averaging ten per cent has been given to all hot mill employes of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company, effective Juuly 1, it became known here today. Fifteen hundred workers in this city will benefit by the increase.

BALLOON HIT IN STORM EXPLODES

None of Crew in Basket at Time; Contestants Are Being Sought

DAYTON, O., July 6.—An observation balloon at McCook field exploded with a bang and went up in flames during a severe electrical storm at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Officials of the field said none of the crew was in the basket at the time, however. A number of persons saw the burst of flame and first reports indicated there had been some casualties. This report was later officially denied.

Static electricity is believed to have caused the explosion, although it was said that lightning might have struck the balloon.

The ferocity of the electrical storm increased as the afternoon progressed, and at 2:30 all Dayton was at a standstill.

There is no indication at this time when things will begin moving again because all fuse blocks were burned out at the Millerford station of the Dayton Power and light plant.

Hundreds of people are marooned in high office buildings with no elevators running and no other means of exit.

All electric cars in the city and a number of interurban lines, newspapers and theatres are completely tied up.

One Balloon Lost

INDIANAPOLIS, July 6.—One balloon representing the United States navy, piloted by Lieut. L. J. Roth, alone remained unaccounted for late this afternoon of the thirteen balloons that started the national elimination race here on July 4.

Word was received that H. E. Honeywell, piloting the St. Louis, had landed near Brockton, N. Y., last night, making the list of those out of it now twelve.

Officials began computing distances to determine which of the thirteen had gone farthest regardless of the time in the act.

Contestants Missing

INDIANAPOLIS, July 6.—Officials in the national elimination balloon race here today were trying to locate remaining contestants in the flight of the thirteen gas bags which began Wednesday afternoon. All but three of the contestants were known to be definitely out of the running.

The most likely winners of the contest appeared to be:

The St. Louis, H. E. Honeywell, pilot; P. J. McCallough, aide.

The army entry, Lieutenant L. J. Roth, pilot, and Lieutenant T. B. Null, aide, of Lakehurst, N. J.

ADVERTISING PLANS ARE OUTLINED

C. of C. Committee Holds Meeting to Discuss Proposed Campaign

PLANS for carrying out the proposed campaign for advertising Glendale were perfected yesterday at a meeting of the advertising committee of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, when it was reported by the chairman, W. L. Twining, that the organization had placed at the disposal of the committee the sum of $7700 to be used in newspaper advertising, and $1500 to be expended on the booklet that is now being prepared and which will be ready to submit to the printers for bids tomorrow. The committee consists of W. L. Twining, L. H. Wilson, P. J. Hayselden, City Manager William H. Reeves, and John R. Case, publicity manager of the Walter H. Leimert Company.

The first of the advertisements that are to appear in the newspapers is now in the hands of the artists and will be ready for publication in either the issues of July 19 or 26, as the committee decides, and only concrete facts of Glendale's growth and opportunities will be used in presenting this city to the thousands of residents of the Southland and to the newcomers who are flocking here on every train and over every highway.

Want Photographs

Residents of Glendale are asked by the advertising committee of the Chamber of Commerce to submit photographs of their homes, taken between the years 1918 and 1920, accompanied by a signed statement showing what the property cost them when they first bought it and giving the figures on the latest transfer of the property or the present holding price, in order to give the readers of the advertisements a definite idea of the advances that are constantly taking place in realty values here. These photographs will all be returned to the owners, and it will be necessary for them to place their names on the pictures to insure their return. Photographs of both residential and industrial property will be used in these advertisements, and stress will be laid on the actual increase in values and the certainty of a still further growth as Glendale's population increases.

Sources of Money

The money for the advertising fund is derived from the service fund that has been formed by the Chamber of Commerce, and to this will be added sixty per cent of the amount received from subscriptions to the organization for memberships. It is the intention of the committee to retain as a re-

FIVE KILLED IN THUNDER STORM

2 Women, Seeking Escape, Die When Automobile Turns Turtle

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 6.—During a severe thunderstorm here this afternoon, five people in Allegheny county were killed by lightning or as a result of the storm. The dead:

Mrs. Anna Walker, 60, of Canton, Ohio; Mrs. Margaret Bowser, 36, of Pittsburgh; William Allen, 54, of Scarford, near Pittsburgh; Mrs. John Gaver, 35, of McKee's Rocks, a suburb; John Slivaisk, 32, of McKeesport.

The Bowser and Walker women were riding in an automobile on a country road near here when the storm came up quickly. They tried to speed up their automobile and it skidded, turning turtle.

Vacate or Pay Rent, Edict to Squatters

SACRAMENTO, July 6.—Surveyor General W. S. Kingsbury today declared war on "squatters" who have assumed control of hundreds of acres of state land. "Vacate or pay rent" was Kingsbury's edict to the self-constituted owners of state property. The state is a lenient landlord, however, the rent being but $15 per tract per year. The modern "squatters" have turned state land in Fish canyon, Los Angeles county, into campsites and recreation grounds, the surveyor general said. The "squatting" population of Los Angeles county alone is over 100.

Wife Slayer Hunted By Washington Posse

ABERDEEN, Wash., July 6.—A posse today is combing the woods in this vicinity for Valentino Osina, who late yesterday shot and killed his wife, Johanna, in their home near here. Osina is believed to have been intoxicated. Neighbors who heard a second shot in a wooded tract nearby lend credence to the belief of Sheriff Gibson that the slayer ended his own life.

Charged With Murder, Man Is Dr. Jekyll, Mr. Hyde Personality, Claim

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Frisco's modern "Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde" is on trial here charged with murder.

And Mrs. Regina Youngman, wife of the "Dr. Jekyll" part of the combination, is fighting an uphill battle to save him from the consequences of his "Mr. Hyde" personality.

Bryant Youngman is the accused man's name. He is charged with the murder of a jewelry clerk here in the course of a holdup while under the influence of the "Mr. Hyde" personality.

Youngman at one time was a prosperous stock salesman, but he suffered from frequent lapses of memory, and during the duration of these spells he is said to have been dominated by a sinister personality.

It is said that on one occasion he married another woman in New York while his mind was a blank.

Mrs. Youngman declares that her husband during his spells of memory failure was utterly irresponsible, but that during his normal intervals he was a loving husband.

She is determined to free her husband of the murder charge so that he may return to her and her 7-year-old daughter.

COMMITS SUICIDE

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—A certificate of suicide was expected to be signed today in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Olive Davis, wife of Detective Wesley Davis of the police night flying squadron, who, it is said, ended her life yesterday by firing a bullet through her heart. PRACTICALLY WHOLE CITY REPORTED MASS OF ROARING FLAMES

45-Mile Gale Is Assisting in Complete Destruction of Mining Community

TONOPAH, Nev., July 6.—The famous mining town of Goldfield, Nev., was practically wiped out today by fire that is still burning.

Starting in the Brown & Parker garage on Main street, the flames, fanned by a forty-five-mile gale, swept one side of Main street, crossed over and consumed most of the buildings on the other side of the street and are now devouring the section of the town located near the depot of the Tonopah & Tidewater railroad.

The town is practically cut off from communication with the outside world. The telephone and telegraph offices were burned and only one line, that of a power company out on the outskirts of the mining center, still remains in use.

Over this line came the only details of the fire. According to the reports received over this wire, the flames were first noticed in the Brown & Parker garage. They spread with amazing rapidity along Main street, the wooden structures furnishing fuel for the blaze.

The flames were partially checked when they reached the Goldfield hotel, this building being damaged. However, a shift in the wind sent the flames chasing in another direction.

Dynamite was resorted to in fighting the fire, but according to reports received here proved ineffective.

The whole population of the mining town is engaged in fighting the fire but lack of water makes their efforts practically useless.

Several scores of volunteers rushed from here to Goldfield by automobile to aid in the battle.

One of the buildings burned was that housing the bank of John S. Cook. Masonic hall, famous in the old days as the "Palace," was destroyed.

The section burned over was practically devoted to business, including many stores, garages and restaurants.

Typical Mining Town

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—A report reached the San Francisco mining exchange today that Goldfield, Nev., mining center is in flames. Details were lacking as Tonopah, Nev., reported that the wires to Goldfield had gone out.

The telephone wires went out when the flames burned the telephone office at Goldfield, the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company reported.

The railroad wires into the town went down, the Southern Pacific connection at Tonopah reported.

Goldfield is a typical "gold

Judge Gary Admits Pledge To Abolish 12-Hour Day

NEW YORK, July 6.—Verification of the steel industry's pledge to abolish the twelve-hour work day, as given to President Harding was made by Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman, in a statement to the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation here today.

"Just when the twelve-hour day will be abolished I cannot say "Judge Gary stated. He said the future course of action would depend upon the labor situation.

"The abolition of the 12 hour day will mean an increase of fifteen per cent in the cost of production," Judge Gary said. "If labor conditions continue to improve as rapidly in the future as they have in the past few months then the abolition will come just that much quicker.

"I personally have never been in favor of the twelve hour day. The steel corporation is determined to assist and co-operate with President Harding in every way.

"The abolition of the twelve-hour day will be made just as quickly as possible.

"We shall have some difficulty in making adjustments which will satisfy large numbers of our workmen. Many of them, particularly those of the foreign element, desire to work longer hours because it means a larger pay."

He said about 200,000 men would be affected by the change when it is completed.

Gary denied in detail all charges made that employes had been mistreated in any way during recent years and branded as false reports that workers in the United States Steel corporation's plants worked more than six days a week.

Gary concluded with an appeal for "more liberal and elastic immigration law, which would permit the entrance into the United States of a labor supply sufficient to meet the demands."

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kimlin At Home From Trip East

Councilman and Mrs. C. E. Kimlin of 219 North Isabel street returned home this morning after a month's trip through the east. They left Chicago Sunday night and were scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles Wednesday morning. Before the train had gotten out of Illinois, however, Mr. Kimlin became ill. He was obliged to leave the train and spend two days in a hospital at Clinton, Iowa. He feels much better now.

Enroute east, Mr. and Mrs. Kimlin stopped off a few hours at Colorado Springs and a day or two at Chicago. While Mrs. Kimlin remained at Battle Creek, Michigan, Mr. Kimlin continued to New York City. On the return trip, they stopped to visit Mr. Kimlin's brother, Will Kimlin, at Bloomington, Illinois.

"We had lots of hot weather," admitted Mr. Kimlin. "It was hot from the time we left Kansas until we returned there again. It was hot practically all the time we were in the east."

From a business standpoint, Mr. Kimlin considers his trip very profitable. He was able to secure especially attractive prices on furniture for the new plant of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital. He ordered this from the Woodard Furniture Company of Owasso, Michigan, whose display rooms he visited in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Although the rugs and certain other fittings have not been purchased yet, Mr. Kimlin estimated this morning that the furnishings for the new institution will cost between $40,000 and $50,000.

Mr. Kimlin, who is a member of the Glendale Exchange club, was a luncheon guest of the Battle Creek Exchange club. They were entertaining the Chicago White Sox, who happened to be in the vicinity to play an exhibition game. Across the table from Mr. Kimlin sat Eddie Collins and Ed Walsh.

J. H. Kellogg, superintendent of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, was very much interested in a report of the construction progress of the local institution. He admired photographs of the local site very much.

Famous Geysers Furnish Heat For Cheap Power

SANTA ROSA, Cal., July 6.—Forecasting the possibility of huge development of cheap power from the earth's heat, the first unit of a plant which eventually may supply electricity for this whole section of California today had successfully harnessed the power of Sonoma county's famous geysers.

The electricity generated from the first unit proved sufficient to light the geyser field where the test is being made. It is the first time, according to engineers watching the experiment, that such harnessing of subterranean power has been successfully accomplished except for a test on a small scale in Italy.

Wells tapping the geyser sources at a depth of 400 feet bring forth the steam to operate turbines, which, in turn, operate the electrical generators.

Belief that an almost exhaustable source of heat and power has been tapped was expressed when it was found that the operation of the power producing unit had no effect on the subterranean temperature in other test wells.

There are 13,000 acres in the geyser area which is 100 miles north or San Francisco.

SAVES BOY'S EYE AFTER EXPLOSION

Quick Work by Doctor Is Needed to Insure That Eyesight Remains

Prompt attention is believed to be responsible for preserving the left eye of Eugene Dowry, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Dowry of 415 West Lexington drive, following a Fourth of July accident.

To conclude the day's celebration, about 9 o'clock, Eugene was preparing to fire a small cannon in the yard of his home. When the fuse refused to work just right, he started to investigate. The cannon exploded while his head was close beside it. The left side of his face was peppered with powder and his left eye was seriously injured.

Eugene was taken in an automobile to 920 South Central avenue where Dr. James A. Belyea was summoned from his home. The party then went to Dr. Belyea's office in the Central Building at 111 East Broadway where he worked over the injured eye until midnight, finally satisfying himself that the sight would not be lost. The remaining powder is being removed from the boy's face this afternoon.

Man Snores At Wheel Of Auto; Bang! Bang! Bang!

"SLEEP that knits up the raveled sleeve of care, the death of each day's life, sore labor's bath, balm of hurt minds, great Nature's second course, chief nourisher in Life's feast!"

That's what "Bill" Shakespeare, the world's leading scenario writer, had to say on the subject.

What Robert Bawbell of 1535 Fuller avenue, Hollywood, had to say on the same subject about 4:30 o'clock this morning was quite different.

"While driving along Colorado street," he reported, "I went to sleep and hit a telephone pole."

The damage amounted to a bruised radiator, bent fender, and dented axle.

SPEND VACATION AT HOT SPRINGS

Ten Day Outing Amid Ideal Surroundings Is Told By W. B. Kelly

Account of a delightful ten-day vacatiton outing at the Ramona Hot Springs in the San Jacinto mountain country is being given by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Kelly of 927 Randolph street, who returned home yesterday. Other Glendalians who have just returned from the same resort are Dr. and Mrs. Warren Z. Newton and Dr. and Mrs. Theodore P. Noehle.

According to Mr. Kelly the 2500-foot elevation of the Ramona springs make the place an ideal spot for an outing.

For those who are seeking toning up of nerves and health there are sixteen hot springs furnishing rejuvenating water containing magnesium and sodium.

The Soboba Indians who live on a nearby reservation have known the restoring powers of the spring waters for centuries, according to Mr. Kelly. The springs provide both hot water baths and hot mud baths.

In addition to the springs there is wonderful surrounding scenery with bridle paths and hiking trails leading into the attractive surroundings.

Dope Squad Rounding Up Members of Ring

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Further arrests were expected today in the roundup of what the federal narcotic squad charges is the most extensive "dope ring" operating on the Pacific coast.

Mrs. Anna E. Patterson spent the night in jail following her arrest as the alleged "queen of the ring," being unable to raise the $10,000 bond fixed for her release by United States Commissioner Krull. Mrs. Patterson was already free on one bond of $10,000 in connection with former charges brought against her.

Gas costing $6 to $9 a thousand cubic feet was used for lighting in many American cities fifty years ago.

People Protest Over Industrial Frontage

Residents of Doran street appeared before the City Council last night to protest against allowing the tract of land occupied by the Glendale Creamery to remain as an industrial district. The protestants did not object to the creamery, they said, but did object to having the frontage on one side of Doran street classed as industrial.

W. P. MacMullin, on behalf of the creamery, declared he had for many years taken a pride in the neighborhood, and would not do anything to work against the property values there.

The council seemed to look with favor on changing the Doran frontage back to residential property, but it was decided to delay action for a week, at Councilman Sam Davis' suggestion.

MORE PROSPERITY

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—Collector of Internal Revenue Rex Goodcell today announced that in the first six months of 1923 approximately 100,000,000 persons attended theares in Southern California. The total amusement tax for that period reached $20,000,000, he said. This was an increase of 18 per cent over last year.

Two Men Battle for Married Woman's Love

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—To win a love no longer legally within the reach of either, two men fought a death duel with pistols in a small room on South Pickett street today. One is dead. The other is a fugitive from justice. Neither knew the woman in the case has long been married.

The dead man is Jesus Raya, descendant of old Aztec aristocracy. The fugitive is Emilio Castro. Both have cherished admiration for the girl, a scintillating Spanish beauty, since four years ago.

CONFLICT ARISES ON ALASKA PLAN

Cabinet Members Do Not Agree on Policies for Northern Territory

territory—from courts to homesteads.

What Wallace Believes

Secretary Wallace declined to be quoted on the Work plan today but stated emphatically that he is opposed to relinquishing any of the agricultural department's control over forestry lands.

"The forests have always been under control of the department of agriculture," said Secretary Wallace. "Under this control there has been built up a wise policy of conservatism which has saved to the people the great reserves of today against the time of national need.

"It is true that control of Alaska is vested in many different departments, but so is control of our own territories. So for that matter does the control of these bureaus extend over the individual states—and yet there is no particular complaint on that score. Alaska is no worse off than the states of the Union themselves."

Secretary Wallace disavowed any knowledge of the so-called Work plan but he made it very clear that he will not see the forestry reserves of Alaska, the greatest in the world today, taken away from the forestry bureau of his department without some stiff opposition.

serve fund at least twenty-five per cent of the money at its disposal, in order to meet any special advertising demands that may be made on it. The publicity committee of the Glendale Realty Board, consisting of Peter L. Hansen chairman; H. L. Finlay and Dr. Jessie A. Russell, has promised to co-operate in the fullest manner with the Chamber of Commerce advertising committee in putting Glendale before the people of the Southland.

In addition to the newspaper campaign, it is planned to use billboards located at strategic points on the main roads where most of the travel flows, and prices are now being received for this service, as well as designs to be used on the billboards.

The entire campaign will be placed in the hands of experts who are accustomed to handling this class of publicity, and it is predicted that a rapid increase of residents will be seen in Glendale as a result of the work of the committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Kimlin At Home From East

Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake company, informed Mr. Kimlin that the day before his visit to the plant it had turned out 1,161,052 packages. He added that 238 loaded freight cars were shipped that week.

While in New York City Mr. Kimlin visited the tenement district for a few minutes as a matter of curiosity. He states that a few minutes was enough and that he soon returned to his hotel nauseated with the odors of garlic and onions and much distressed to find that human beings should be content to live under such conditions.

"Conditions seem to be very good in the east," he remarked. "Everything seems to be moving along nicely. The farmers seem to be somewhat discouraged. They don't seem to be getting along as well as they should. My brother, who has a 360-acre farm, feeds his grain to the hogs and sells the hogs and gets his money out of it that way."

Before reaching home, Mr. and Mrs. Kimlin motored by the new plant of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital. They were much pleased with the progress of its construction during their absence.

HARROWER PLANT IS INCORPORATED

Make Plans to Meet Big Increase in Business Throughout World

Spicer puts it. "Dr. Harrower will remain the life and soul of the organization." However, he has absolutely freed himself of any commercial worries by turning over the business to those who have so capably developed the sale of the products both at home and abroad.

It may be stated that Mr. Spicer has had a phenomenal career in the business life of New York and London, being associated with several large private enterprises. Mr. Howarth at home here has directed the vast business with the utmost efficiency.

Over Million Dollars

It was the statement some time ago that the Harrower Laboratory did more than a million dollar business last year. Records so far, month by month, show a decided increase over 1922 with a greater demand being noted daily for the remedies which are sold exclusively to physicians.

Concerned in the incorporation and development of the business are six branch offices located at Chicago, Baltimore, Kansas City, Dallas, Tex., Denver and Portland, Ore. The New York and London businesses are carried on separately.

Regarding the latter, Mr. Spicer states that the Harower medicine is widely accepted in Europe although a large trade has not been built up with several countries in which the rate of exchange is so depreciated as to make trading impossible.

There are 110 people employed by the Harrower Laboratory, Inc., eighty of whom are Glendale residents. They are engaged in the medical, research, manufacturing, sales, accounting, literary and promotion departments of the business. Perhaps twenty other people get their living as a direct result of the laboratory being located here and it is rated as the most prolific correspondent using the United States mails at this point.

40 Hours of Labor

A five-day week for the workers is maintained, the employes having both Saturday and Sunday free. An eight-hour schedule is used and in the forty hours of labor Mr. Spicer feels confident that the greatest results are obtained by the operators of the various mechanical devices entering into the manufacture of tablets by the millions.

All of the employes are specially trained in their particular work, and the most modern package machinery is used, assuring the utmost of sanitation and standardization in the product.

Incidentally, this institution has made Glendale famed the world over as a center of medical science and, as a sidelight on the material benefits, it might be stated that the Harrower foundation for the furtherance of medical education is now operating in local and foreign fields.

GOLDFIELD SWEPT BY GALE, FLAMES

Resort to Dynamite in Effort To Stop Fire From Spreading

rush" town of frame buildings and shacks scattered over a considerable area.

Its water supply is meager and once flames were started it would be difficult to hold them in check.

Goldfield Woman, Here on Visit, Tells of Fire Scene

Destruction of the business section of Goldfield, Nevada, a mining town of 2000 people, was news of interest to Mrs. V. L. Ricketts, widow of the late editor and manager of the Goldfield Tribune. She is stopping with her son Victor at Hotel Gray.

The Brown & Parker garage, in which the blaze is reported to have started, is located on South Main street, running through to Columbia street. Adjoining it on the north is the old Nevada hotel, a two story frame structure which undoubtedly was the first building in the path of the flames.

Mrs. Ricketts does not believe that the palatial brick Goldfield hotel on the east side of Main street was destroyed, nor does she think that the News block on the opposite corner which contained the Tribune printing plant was burned, as it is a substantial structure and has weathered several fires.

Fire Two Years Ago

The northwest corner of Main and Crook streets was burned out a year ago with $40,000 damage and Mrs. Ricketts believes the new frame construction there again fell prey to the flames. The Masonic temple in the same block is reported destroyed and evidently the fire crossed Main street at that point and destroyed the John S. Cook bank building which contained offices of several mining companies operating in Goldfield's vicinity.

The telegraph office was north of the Masonic temple and the telephone office was to the rear of the Cook bank. Connections with both of these offices were reported destroyed. The damage will approximate several hundred thousand dollars, in the belief of Mrs. Ricketts, from the hasty description of the burned area.

"Everything is dry just like powder, as there are no rains after April," according to Mrs. Ricketts. Fire Chief Gillac of Goldfields has a paid department to fight the flames and undoubtedly the Tonopah department was called to aid in the battle on the blaze, it being only thirty miles away, about an hour by motorcar.

Goldfield formerly had a population of 22,000 people when the mining boom was at its height, according to Mrs. Ricketts. Many vacant buildings of wooden construction made a serious fire hazard, according to insurance rates.

Policeman Kills Boy Stealing Spotlight

SEATTLE, July 6.—Walter Berg, 19 years old, was shot and almost instantly killed by Patrolman C. G. Stanhope late last night when, according to Stanhope, Berg and a companion, Raymond Dunn, 17, were caught in the act of stealing a spotlight from an automobile.

Dunn escaped, but later surrendered himself at the police station and is being held on an open charge.

DOG ORDINANCE TO BE DISCUSSED

New City Law to Be Drawn As Result of Meeting At City Hall

A conference will be held between representatives of the Glendal Dog Protective association and municipal officials, at the City Hall, 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, July 9, when the proposed ordinances affecting dogs and other animals, recently submitted to the City Council by the association, will be discussed, with a view to ironing out the details so that the desired action may be had. Among those present at the conference will be Mayor Spencer Robinson, Police Chief John D. Fraser and Councilmen William A. Horn and Asa Hall.

The decision to hold this conference is the result of the appearance before the City Council last night of Edwin F. Kulp, of the Glendale Dog Protective association, with a plea that such a get-together be arranged.

While certain changes in the proposed ordinances will, no doubt, be made, it seems likely that the skeleton plan, as outlined by the association, will be retained.

These tentative ordinances, submitted to the City Council at their meeting of Monday night, July 2, provide for the creation of a "Humane Animal Commission" and prescribe its powers and duties.

Hughes Abandons Hope Of Twelve-Mile Limit

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary of State Hughes has about abandoned all hope of securing favorable action from Great Britain on his proposed treaty extending the three-mile limit to twelve miles, to aid in suppressing rum running off American coasts, it was admitted at the state department today.

DOCTOR REMOVES TO NEW OFFICES

Dr. Cagle Will Occupy Suite In Rudy Building on North Brand

Dr. C. M. Cagle has moved his chiropractic treatment rooms from the Central Building at 111 East Broadway to the Rudy Building at 103-A North Brand boulevard in order that he might obtain a front office.

Dr. Cagle, who formerly lived in Escondido, is a graduate of the Los Angeles School of Chiropractic. During the latter portion of his course he was an instructor in technique to the lower classmen and took an active part in the school's clinic.

"The theory of chiropractic is that all tissues of the body are controlled by the life force," he explained, illustrating his remarks with a segment of a miniature and artificial spine. "The seat of this force is in the brain and it is transmitted through the nerves to the different tissues. The only place that force can be interfered with is in the openings of the spine where the nerves leave the spinal column. An impingement upon these nerves will cause the part controlled by this nerve to lose part of its controlling force and give disease a foothold. When this pressure is removed from the nerve the parts are enlivened again and they become normal and disease disappears."

Plan to Pave Street With Rubber Dropped

AKRON, Ohio, July 6.—Plans for paving a short section of an Akron street with rubber have been abandoned because of the excessive cost, according to E. A. Kemmler, head of the Bureau of Highways. He said a conference was soon to be held between the engineers of the Highway Department and a representative of a rubber company, but expected no solution of the problem.

"Rubber paving," Kemmler said, "is proving popular in London, but the cost is very high. Contrary to the general belief, a rubber pavement has no odor when the sun shines on it, and does not bounce the pedestrian along the surface. "In fact, there is little rubber in such a pavement, the product serving mainly as a matrix."

Club Women Extend Sympathy to Leader

Glendale clubwomen are extending their sympathy to Mrs. John C. Urquhart, president of the California Federation Women's clubs, whose husband, Dr. Urquhart, died Wednesday, July 4, 1923, at the family home in Santa Monica at the age of 65 years.

Dr. Urquhart had been in ill-health for many months and Mrs. Urquhart has not been present at any club event since the convention at Eureka. Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at Santa Monica.

Prosperity Continues In Pacific Southwest; Due to Remain During All of 1923

CONTINUED prosperity for the Pacific-Southwest during the remainder of 1923, despite present spotted conditions, is indicated in the monthly Summary of Conditions in the Pacific Southwest, compiled by the research department of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank and the First Securities Company, which is released for publication today. The report, in part, follows:

Spotted conditions continue to cause some uncertainty with regard to the economic outlook in the Pacific Southwest, with the favorable factors outweighing unfavorable considerations sufficiently to argue for continued prosperity for the Pacific Southwest during the remainder of 1923. The principal causes of concern are the market situation with regard to some agricultural products and the petroleum outlook.

Indications are that the major agricultural difficulties will be caused by abnormal consumption rather than abnormal production. Evidence that the economic rehabilitation of Europe is essential to restabilization of the markets for some Pacific Southwest products is found in the fact that the subnormal consumption of California canned fruits by European countries, particularly England, is the prime factor which is unsettling the markets for certain California deciduous fruits.

Generally Satisfactory

Uncertainty with regard to consumptive trends in many lines is causing purchasers of Pacific Southwest agricultural products to proceed cautiously in making of advance commitments and is consequently causing some concern in the minds of many agricultural producers.

Nevertheless, the outlook is generally satisfactory. The entire agricultural production of this territory will probably be as large as in any previous year. The market situation is slowly but gradually improving for most commodities. The citrus markets have generally strengthened during June; the cotton situation argues for higher prices than last year; the bean situation is satisfactory; the grain outlook is better than it was earlier in the season; the movement of vegetables and melons is proceeding satisfactorily.

A factor of no small value in the maintenance of economic stability is found in the fact that the districts which were hardest hit by the depression of 1920 are those in which the agricultural outlook is most satisfactory today with the major difficulties being encountered in those districts which, because of recent prosperity, are in the best position to withstand temporary marketing uncertainties.

While there is a temporary surplus of half-fat cattle, the livestock situation is improving steadily, with indications that producers generally receive a small profit this year as compared with a loss during 1922.

Commercial Situation

The commercial situation continues healthy. The retail turnover of June has slightly exceeded that of May and averages from fifteen to thirty per cent in excess of June a year ago. Wholesaling and jobbing trade is still dominated by conservative influences, but the volume of movement has exceeded that of May. The credit situation is generally satisfactory. There is practically no evidence of overstocking in any line, both retailers and wholesalers buying only for immediate requirements.

The industrial outlook, with the exception of the petroleum situation, is most favorable, but it must be remembered that a great many manufactured products for use in the oil fields and for construction in the city are more or less dependent on the petroleum situation, and any serious setback in the petroleum situation will necessarily affect industrial production, in the manufacturing line at least. Skilled and semi-skilled workers are fully employed. While there is little evidence of a shortage of labor, all indications point toward full employment of workers, in both agricultural and industrial districts, for the next several months.

Petroleum Situation

The petroleum situation is becoming increasingly unsatisfactory, production having increased approximately 60,000 barrels a day during the month of June in spite of strenuous efforts for curtailment of output, now averaging 750,000 barrels daily as compared with a daily production of 355,000 barrels in June of 1922. Since local consumption and the development of export markets cannot hope to keep pace with this expanding production, available storage facilities are crowded to capacity. However, the rapid decrease in production in many Long Beach wells, and prediction by competent observers that the next few months will see the big companies in control of the situation, with the practical elimination of independents, and elimination of overdrilling, gives grounds for hope that the crisis may pass by the fall months.

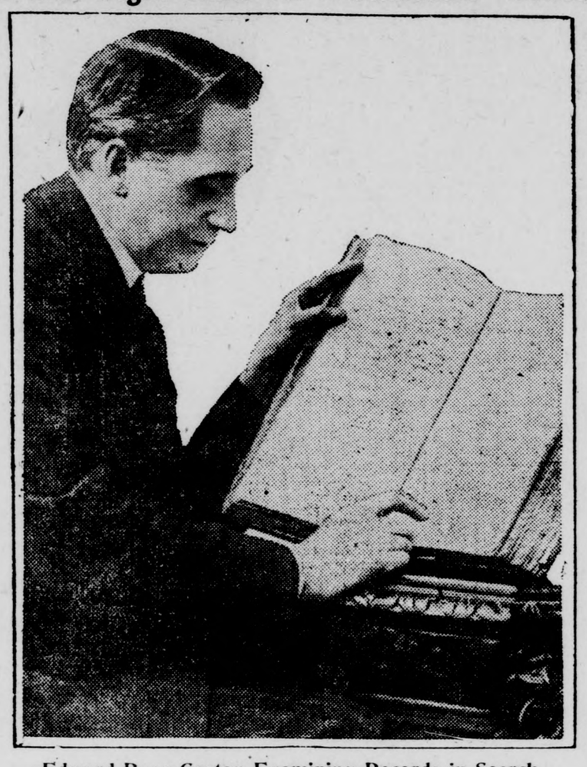
Although the quiet condition prevailing in the bond market during May has continued throughout June, there has been increasing evidence of a strong undertone, with prices showing a tendency to advance during the latter part of the month and with high grade offerings being received with favor by investors. Failure of stock exchange houses has had a tendency to turn money which would otherwise have gone into speculative securities into the bond market.

The banking situation gives evidence of increasing strength. Generally, the unsatisfactory factors have been discounted and a careful credit policy has prevented the tying up of undue sums in frozen loans, although sufficient money has been available for carrying agricultural producers until satisfactory markets open. The efficacy of intercommunity banking in supplying the credit requirements of the Pacific Southwest is becoming increasingly evident.

District by district, the general outlook may be characterized as promising.

SEARCH FOR TOMB IS OPPOSED

British Fight Hunt for Pocahontas' Bones



Edward Page Gaston Examining Records in Search of Pocahontas' Remains

Britishers have united behind Lord Curzon in opposing the continued search of Edward Page Gaston, an American, for the bones of Pocahontas, the Indian princess famed by legend as the saviour of Capt. John Smith. The tomb of the princess is believed to be under the chancel of the little church at Gravesend, England. Gaston hopes to remove the bones to the United States, where they can be placed in a shrine.

RECRUITING FOR GUARD COMPANY

Room for Ten More Men in Co. M., Says Officer, As Camp Nears

Opportunities for ten men to enjoy a vacation near Salinas in camp with the California National Guard are offered by Company M of Glendale, it is announced by Captain J. H. Wittmeyer, commanding. A big rodeo, boxing, wrestling and baseball games will provide half of the entertainment, while army training will be featured in the mornings. The smallest amount of work and the greatest amount of fun are promised by the officers this year.

And while they are enjoying this outdoor camping trip the boys will receive pay, according to Staff Sergeant E. L. Welch, who is assisting Captain Wittmeyer with the recruiting. Welch is a regular army instructor, having served overseas as a captain. Only three days remain for enlistments, and he urges those who wish to go with Company M to report before noon Saturday.

The train with the Los Angeles regiment will stop at both Glendale and Burbank to pick up the local companies, including headquarters company here. Any radio or signal men desiring headquarters work can be accommodated on this trip, according to Sergeant Welch.

ASK PERMIT FOR LOCAL BUS LINE

Police Chief Favors Grant Of Franchise But Would Avoid Congestion

The proposed local bus line was the principal business considered last night by the City Council. Application for permission to operate a bus line between Tenth and Alameda streets to Colorado and Lincoln streets was filed with the city administration by Attorney Mattison B. Jones of 727 Kenneth road, member of the law firm of Jones, Wilson & Stephenson. T. K. Brown of 1046 Thompson street is the applicant.

Col. J. D. Fraser, chief of police, reported favorably upon the application for a franchise, but suggested that the route should continue south on Central avenue to Colorado street instead of coming to Brand boulevard as outlined in the petition.

"As you are aware," he remarked, Brand boulevard is not now large enough to take care of the vehicles between Wilson avenue and Colorado street, and to permit a bus to run on this line, stopping between these three blocks in the most congested part of the business section, would only tend further to congest the traffic which is already there."

On motion of Councilman Sam Davis, the City Council decided to consider the suggestions of the police head in the committee of the whole.

A crucial moment is the test of strength.

TELLS AMERICA'S DEBT TO ROTARY

Phoenix Minister Recalls Optimism of Members in Economic Crisis

America's debt to the Rotary organization during the crisis of 1920-21 was revealed to members of the local club yesterday afternoon at their luncheon in Glen Inn banquet room, by the Rev. Lee Howard, Congregational pastor from Prescott, Ariz., who added:

"If I live to be as old as Methuselah I would still be an enthusiastic Rotarian."

He had related how, when the United States was facing an economic crisis, the optimism of Rotarians as evinced by their messages seen on every side had encouraged business men to continue with a smile in face of deflation.

Rev. Howard also paid high tribute to President Harding, pointing to his speech before the pioneers at Meacham, Ore., on Tuesday as an epic. He urged every one to save this masterpiece of oratory.

W. E. Hewitt, director of the Chamber of Commerce, introduced E. F. Sanders, secretary of that civic organization, who told of the reception to be accorded Harding on his visit here and asked the Rotarians to be in line 100 per cent.

Greetings from Members

A letter from George B. Karr, president of the club, giving an account of the International Rotary convention at Kansas City was read, as was a telegram containing patriotic remembrances from Karr's old home town of Parsons, Kan., and J. I. Wernette sent greetings from Michigan.

Several other members are absent attending various conventions, it was reported, but visitors made up the usual quota of Rotarians present. They included Sam Johnston, Fred C. Moran, Ned Durbin and A. Carman Smith of Los Angeles, Phil E. Zeiss and E. R. Butterfield of Burbank, Rev. Lee Howard of Prescott, Ariz., and Thurm Morelane of Chillicothe.

Musical Program

At the close of the business meeting Allen R. Eastman of the Glendale State bank, who served as special program chairman, introduced Miss Mary Jewel Shelton and L. R. Black of his bank who sang and played, Paul Carson accompanying Mr. Black and the latter accompanied Miss Shelton.

She featured "The Last Song" by Tosti and "The Swallow Song" and entertained with a "Mammy" pianologue which won much applause. Mr. Black was encored for his rendition of "Gypsy John" and he also sang "Time Was When I Roamed the Mountains." J. Herbert Smith, who presided, expressed the prevailing sentiment when he said Mr. Eastman had provided a most pleasing program.

SHARPENED SPURS

Sharpened spurs that can be clamped to the sides of ladders to prevent them slipping have been invented.

People attend market in larger proportion in Washington, D. C., than in any other city, it is said.

Portland Visitor Alters His Estimate Of City's Size After Inspection

By GIL A. COWAN

VISITORS in Glendale are unable to appreciate the size and beauty of this community unless you appoint yourself a committee of one to see that they see the "sights." F'rinstance, H. T. Hopkins, commercial representative of International News Service and the King Syndicate visited The Glendale Evening News office on business yesterday.

"You have quite a town for 15,000 people," he said, being well informed by the 1920 census and giving Glendale the benefit of the doubt by quoting round numbers. Mr. Hopkins heas out of Portland, Ore., where they don't grow 'em so rapidly, maybe.

"Yeah, this is a pretty good town for 40,000 population," was the red hot reply he got. "Just jump in the motorcar for a few minutes and see our city."

So away we went on a circle of the city that took less than an hour and may result in some mighty good business for Mr. Hopkins for he learned something more about Southern California than his San Francisco office or Portland home folks had indicated.

Looks Over Verdugos

Out to Kenneth road we fluttered in all haste to give our guest a good "look" at Glendale. He got it and began to think there were 25,000 inhabitants in the valley he saw. So to make the picture more complete we hustled out Verdugo road through the woodlands and up to Montrose where he looked back and saw more of Glendale.

"I'll grant you 30,000," he said, so it was thought best to show him some natural scenery which the folks up north say "we ain't got." Out to Flintridge we flutttered and down along the west side of the Arroyo Seco into Pasadena. Mr. Hopkins saw the Tournament of Roses bowl, Brookside park and other points of interest, including the Colorado street bridge in all of its majestic beauty as viewed from Linda Vista.

Then we hurried him back through Eagle Rock as fast as the speed law allows and when we reached the eastern city limits we showed him the half million dollar Glendale sanitarium and hospital, also the half million dollar high school plant and the hundreds of homes in the foothills as well as the East Broadway business section with its city hall.

Say, would you believe it? He admitted we had scenery such as he never had seen before. And he was willing to concede there were 40,000 people within our precincts and in order to return the compliment we had to say that International News Service was the best ever and we were sorry "Spark Plug" isn't for sale in this territory for he sells that and other comics.

Starts Celebrating

Then we celebrated over a lemonade which had such a potent effect that Mr. Hopkins started spreading joy among the local merchants. The last we saw of him, he was buying a new summer suit which he claimed was sold cheaper here than those just like it he had seen in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

Oh, yes. Almost forgot to tell you we showed him the beautiful Glendale theatre where International News pictures are shown and he thought he would like to trade places with Manager Howe. Or he would take our job writing this stuff if he could live in Glendale.

So we claim it was worth our 20 cents' worth of gasoline and one hour's taxicab service to tell the story of Glendale better than words and making a booster out of the boostingest person we ever met anyway.

P. S.—When Harry visits San Francisco or Los Angeles they don't say "nothing" about it. But we do.

BUILDS SPANISH STYLE RESIDENCE

Prize Winning Plans Used in Erecting Handsome California House

Wilbur F. Lake, of Burbank, is owner of the attractive California house being erected at 1340 Virginia avenue by Ralph H. Doose, contractor and builder. An interesting fact about the house plans is that they are ones that won one of the building prizes at the San Diego Exposition in 1915.

Mr. Lake's lot is seventy-two by 206 feet and the house covers a ground area of forty-five by forty-three feet and is to cost approximately $9,000. It will be of the Spanish type with patio. The plans call for a one-story structure of seven rooms and three porches. The exterior finishing will be cream plaster, while the interior in the main rooms will be mahogany. An arch effect is used in the porch designs.

A special feature is the double fireplace, serving the living room and the patio directly back of it. This patio will be on the east side of the house and will furnish an ideal summer sitting room.

Plastering work is now in progress, and it is Mr. Doose's intention to have the house completed by September 1.

Building Permits for Year Total $5,253,010

ST. MARK'S GUILD IN SOCIAL MEET

Members Hear Reports and Short Talk From Rector On 'Friendliness'

Action making Mrs. Philip K. Kemp an honorary member of the Guild of St. Mark's Episcopal church was one of the features of the first summer social meeting of the Guild.

Mrs. A. A. Bassett, president of the Guild, presided over a short business hour, and Mrs. F. S. Card was hostess at the informal social time following.

Other events of the afternoon were reports of the past month's work and an informal talk by the rector, Rev. Kemp, on "Friendliness." Rev. Kemp heartily congratulated the Guild women on their loyalty to the Guild and on the success of their concerted efforts.

Entertaining piano numbers were given by Miss Clara Wolter, who came recently from Montana to reside with her family in Glendale. Miss Wolter was formerly a member of the faculty of the department of music at the University of Montana. She played, yesterday, "Gondolera," by Moszkowski, and "The Shadow Dance."

From San Antonio

An added pleasure of the afternoon was the presence of Mrs. Kemp's mother, Mrs. Frank W. Church, of San Antonio, Texas, who with her daughter, Mary June, is visiting Rev. and Mrs. Kemp. Mrs. Church responded graciously to an introduction and told of the Guild activities in San Antonio.

Tea and cakes were served later in the afternoon by Mrs. Card and her assistants.

Mrs. Card is planning that, on the occasion of the next meeting, July 19, the Guild women will motor to the Home for Aged Women at Alhambra, for tea with the old people. Her plan was heartily endorsed by the company yesterday.

Leave on Trip Into North Part of State

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Farlander and children, Barbara and Richard of 354 Riverdale Drive, Stillman Chase of 400 Riverdale and Waldo Yard were members of a party that left Monday morning of this week for a motor trip and outing in the northern part of the state. They will journey in company to Portland, Seattle and Vancouver, visiting many points of interest en route. From there the two young men are planning to leave the party and motor across the country to Minnesota, Ohio and possibly as far as Boston. They expect to enter Yellowstone Park and probably Glacier park. They are both graduates of Glendale High School in the class of 1923.

LA CRESCENTA

PRIZES OFFERED AT GIRLS' PARTY

Miss Ethelyn Smith Hostess To Youngsters at Home In La Crescenta

Miss Ethelyn Smith, of Los Angeles avenue, entertained a party of small girls in her home yesterday afternoon.

The young ladies made tissue paper dollies, the cleverest being made by Helen Haskins, who carried off the prize, which was a writing portfolio fully equipped. This young miss also carried off the prize in the mirror drawing contest. This prize was a jar of candy.

Ice cream decorated with tiny silk flags, cookies, salted peanuts, chocolates and jelly beans were served the kiddies. After the refreshments were served Dr. Smith took pictures of the little party. Those present were Jean, Constance and Betty Angier, Evelyn Adkins, Virginia and Helen Haskins, Catharine Sharp and Elizabeth Talbot Martin.

Dr. Weber, of Hollywood, has rented his new semi-stone house on Montrose avenue to Mr. and Mrs. Young.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Miller entertained on a motor trip Mr. and Mrs. Kankle and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Miller of Huntington Park. The party motored up to Big Rock, staying over two days.

Camp at Owens Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Card, with Mrs. Card, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Ben Card and family of Wilmington, left yesterday on a ten days' camping trip at Owens lake. Fishing will be the chief sport of the campers.

Mrs. Ingham, of Florencita drive, has rented her house to newcomers to California.

Miss Drennan, proprietress of the La Crescenta hotel, and some of the hotel guests, attended the funeral of Miss Foster yesterday in Glandale. Miss Foster spent a great deal of her time at the hotel.

The Murdock family, accompanied by Dorothy Potter as their guest, spent the Fourth at Seal Beach, but report the day was rather chilly.

Among those who spent the Fourth at Topanga canyon were members of the Young and Conlin families.

Mrs. C. C. Miller, of West Montrose avenue, is gaining fame as a horticulturist by raising dahlias which have heads measuring from five to seven inches across. They are golden bronze and ruby red in color. Two of them are on exhibition in the La Crescenta Pharmacy.

Mrs. Young and family have moved into their house, lately vacated by Mrs. Alma Austen. The house is situated on Los Angeles avenue, nearly opposite the school house.

Fear of Ghost Hangs Over English Village

WINDSOR, Eng., July 6.—Is a royal ghost, out of the ages, to blame for recent nightly disturbances reported from the riverside folks of Datchet on Thames?

The question is exciting Windsor and surrounding villages.

Strange apparitions are reported in the dead of night near an old monastery connected with St. Helen's. Subterranean passages run from the ruins of the monastery to unexplored depths, but it is stated that there is one passage which leads to Windsor Castle.

Ernest Scian declares that he recently saw the ghostly form of a woman hovering about the monastery ruins, and when he approached the figure disappeared with a hissing sound.

Other residents report that they have seen apparitions and heard the sounds of beautiful singing coming from the monastery at night.

University to Give Course in Building

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 6.—Having just announced the coming adoption of a course in nursing, Yale University now promises further expansion of subjects with a course in building construction. From funds furnished by the trustees of the Louis J. and Mary E. Horowitz Foundation, the Thompson-Starrett Foundation in Building Construction is to come along with two scholarships to those who finish the course.

"It is the donors' purpose to supply a number of technically educated men to perfect the capacity and work of the constructor in the hope that building construction will become a profession as dignified as that of architecture," says the official announcement.

Lioness and Cubs Are Carried By Airplane

PARIS, July 6.—The most curious cargo ever transported by airplane recently arrived at Le Bourget, the Paris air port, from Rotterdam, Holland. It consisted of a lioness and two cubs.

They couldn't be transported by rail because of the Belgian railroad strike and because the Dutch railways refused to accept them. The lions were consigned to Marcel, a Paris lion tamer, the same man who bought the cook stove of the Bluebeard Landru to use for exhibition purposes.

The lions seemed none the worse for their trip.

Lowry, pastor of the Presbyterian church, was instructed to appoint a committee to meet with Professor Baumann and perfect plans for such an organization.

The station also has a Tamworth sow, with a litter of eleven pigs, having weaned a litter of twelve some weeks before farrowing the eleven.

Blackiston, explorer-scientist, today was on the highseas, with his ultimate destination the Fiji group of islands in the South Seas. Into the remote fastnesses of the treacherous head hunters Blackiston plans to penetrate, hoping to discover tribesmen closely akin to their neighbors, the hairy similans.

Blackiston was accompanied, when he sailed July 1 from Los Angeles harbor, by Tilden Daken, painter of poetic landscapes. The explorer-scientist bases his faith in the Darwinian theory on his observation of reasoning faculties exhibited by the lower animals.

RADIO SPELLING BEE IS PLANNED

Four States to Take Part in Contest to Be Held Early in November

SACRAMENTO, July 6.—Because of widespread interest in the unique contest outside of the state, Will C. Wood, state superintendent of public instruction, announced today that four neighboring states will be permitted to enter the radio spelling bee to be staged early in November.

During the National Education Conference Wood will confer with J. A. Churchill, Oregon; Josephine Preston, Washington; W. J. Hunting, Nevada, and J. O. Case of Arizona, heads of the state school departments in their respective states, relative to the entrance of senior high school students from their states in the contest.

The spelling examination will be broadcasted by Wood from either Sacramento or San Francisco, Emerson's Essays being used as the examination material.

The spelling contest, which is intended to prove the reliability of modern educational methods, will be taken by thousands of students, "listening in" at their respective schools.

CLEAR OUT HUGE STOCK OF SHOES

Specialty Boot Shop Making Room for Fall and Winter Shipments

The semi-annual sale of Florsheim shoes announced a few days ago by the Specialty Boot Shop has met with a very ready response on the part of Glendale men and young men, according to the management.

It was pointed out that the stock on sale was a clearance of spring and summer styles, an event made necessary, in order to have space for the arrival of fall and winter shoes.

Included in the sale are especially attractive buys for women and girls.

"The values offered," said Mr. Goldberg, "are unquestionable. We handle nothing but standard lines and most of them are nationally advertised, so we feel confident that the public will not be slow to take advantage of our sale."

Americans Learning to Address Letters

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The great American public is "learning" to address letters.

The postoffice department announced recently that less difficulty will be experienced by postmasters of succeeding generations in the delivery of mail, because letters will be more legibly addressed.

Reports from letter-writing tests in a score of schools throughout the country show school children are receiving exceptionally high ratings. Postmaster General New is encouraging postmasters, to arrange similar tests in schools of their respective communities. He also urged impressing the general public with the importance of correctly addressed mail.

Mistakes in addresses have dumped millions of letters annually in the "dead letter" office, at a great waste of service. Illegible addresses have also retarded speed of delivery.

Get Divorce, Advises Hubby; Wife Files Suit

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—Mrs. Marie Blesig took her husband at his word and filed a petition for divorce, she declares in her bill.

When she questioned him about his four previous marriages, which she charges he had concealed from her, he told her "to get a divorce like the rest of them did." This she asks the court to do.

When Princess Ola Hassan, now the wife of a British army officer, obtained her divorce from Prince Ibrahim Hassan, nephew of the former Egyptian khedive, she was so happy she forgot to pay her lawyers, one of them now claims. He has sued to collect the fee he says is due. The princess denies the claim.

Disprove Claim That Early Marriages Fail

GREEN BAY, Wis., July 6.—Those experts on the subject of matrimony who decry early marriages might well study the record established by a Green Bay family. Through four generations girl members of that family have married before reaching the age of 16 years—and all married happily.

With the birth of Donald Bailey to Mr. and Mrs. Wade Bailey of Green Bay, Mrs. Fred Toutloff, mother of the wife, became a grandmother at the age of thirty-three. Her daughter is sixteen years old.

Mrs. Toutloff's mother, who was married at fourteen, became a great-grandmother at fifty-three. The great-grandmother is Mrs. Peter Van Helder of this city.

The record for the family is held by Mrs. Captain Harry Johnson, deceased, who was married at thirteen. Captain Johnson, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Toutloff, became a great-great-grandfather at seventy-eight.

"Successful marriages depend upon circumstances, not ages," declared Mrs. Toutloff when asked for her opinion on the question. "Though I do not approve of early marriages as a rule, in my case I have never regretted it."

Mrs. Van Helder, who became a great-grandmother at fifty-three, thinks the girl who marries young has an "even break" with those who await maturity.

"It all depends on those involved," she declared. "I believe a girl who marries in her 'teens has an equally good chance for happiness with the one who waits."

Ancients Used Good Razors for Shaving

LONDON, July 6.—Shaving in the days before Christ was not such a painful operation as some modern people would think, if some remarkable antique finds, including a wonderfully preserved razor blade found near the old Roman camp at Ham Hill, near Yeovil, England, bear out the experts' claims as to their origin and antiquity.

The blade, which is of iron, is mounted in modern fashion, with the joint-pole pin between blade and tang, on a bone handle, carved with a dot and circle ornamentation, and is certainly of great age.

Other relics found during the excavations of this treasure ground include a bronze mounted dagger, a fine specimen of Roman armor, the cuirass of which consists of over 300 scales of bronze and is estimated to belong to the period of 350 A. D., and many human remains.

French Expenditure Outstrip Reparations

PARIS, July 6.—France spent more than four times as much as Germany has paid during the four years from the signing of the armistice to December 31, 1922, according to recently compiled figures.

France's expenditures for reparation of war damages, for pensions, for reimbursement of civilians for property damage and numerous other things, were $8,165,000,000. This figure was given out by Premier Poincare in a speech in the Chamber of Deputies.

In contrast, Germany paid in reparations, in cash and kind, only $1,981,856,644. These are the official figures of the Reparations Commission.

TODAY—Premiers Baldwin and Poincare; The Peril to the Entente.

TOMORROW—L. A. Bans Bicycle Cops; Police Department Expands.—By Walter G. Cayce, L. A. Correspondent.

By DAVID M. CHURCH
For International News Service

LONDON, July 6.—Will M. Raymond Poincare prove an insurmountable barrier to the success of Stanley Baldwin, prime minister of Great Britain?

Political circles are debating this question. Many hold that Poincare was the obstacle over which Lloyd George stubbed his toe out of Downing street, and the rock in the unfortunate attempt of Bonar Law to tread a path of "peace and tranquillity."

Anglo-French relations are important to Great Britain. With France across the narrow English Channel within easy striking distance of English shores, it is important that there be an Anglo-French accord. Statesmen who can't agree with France or who can't persuade France to agree with Great Britain have troubled times.

M. Poincare has been rather disinclined to pay much respect to the British views and wishes since he took office, and every fortnight or so the English press has announced that the Anglo-French entente is threatened.

Bonar Law sought to temporize with the French premier, and he was forced by worry and ill health to give up office.

Now comes Stanley Baldwin to lock horns with the statesman from across the Channel. He seems to have two courses open to him—either to accept or disregard the dictates of M. Poincare. There certainly are no signs that Poincare has any intention of being persuaded out of his stiff stand upon the reparations problem.

Until this is settled no British prime minister will have clear sailing.

Since Poincare is so vital a factor in the whole reparations problem there is great conjecture as to how Stanley Baldwin will deal with him. If he doesn't deal with him, or perhaps without him, then his tenure of office is threatened.

Exclusive Troon—that's what the American golfers thought of it.

The American golfers appeared at Troon to practice for the British Open Championships three weeks before the tournament opened. Every day they were witnessed, as they started off the first tee, by silent, impassive members of the Troon club, sitting behind a plate glass front. Never once were they invited inside the clubhouse. The answer is that they were professional players, and even in Scotland it seems that a professional player is not the social equal of a club member, and clubs can't be contaminated by the presence of professionals within their portals. Exclusive Troon is right.

At last British gastronomic tastes have been changed. The British have been advertised into a taste for ice cream. Taking a leaf from the American book, the chain restaurants owned by Lyons & Company opened an ice cream factory. A year ago this factory, under American management, turned out 500 pints of ice cream a week and almost had to force it down the British throat. Advertising was resorted to, and now Londoners are consuming 10,000 gallons of ice cream a week and demanding more. Perhaps even Mr. Wrigley's product may yet become popular in England.

"The Workers' Dreadnought," edited by Sylvia Pankhurst and described as an "ultra-Communist" periodical, is apparently displeased with the trend of events in Moscow.

A recent issue contains an article on conditions in Moscow which breathes discontent because the days of undiluted Bolshevism appeared to be passing.

"The economic screw is being put on the townspeople more and more," the paper complains. "The free rations, clothing and rent and fuel of the early days after the revolution are gone."

PROPER WAY TO CONNECT "A" AND "B" BATTERIES

Very little has been written concerning proper connections for vacuum tubes, whether detector or amplifier type, and of the various makes. One diagram you look at shows the negative B battery connected to the positive A battery, and the next one shows the negative B connected to the negative A. You no doubt have wondered why the discrepancy. There is a reason for it, which will be explained later.

There are two kinds of audions used in receiving sets, the hard and soft tube; or, one is highly evacuated and the other is not. The hard tubes are used as amplifiers and are not critical as to plate potential and will successfully operate over a wide range of voltages, whereas the detector, or soft tube, requires critical plate voltage for best results. It is for this reason that a soft tube gives much better results when used with a potentiometer. In Figure 1 is shown a detector connected in circuit, minus the tuner. When the slider on the potentiometer is at A we have the normal voltage of the B battery impressed on the plate, but when the slider is at B the voltage of the A battery is added to it and in the case of a six-volt battery we have plate potential of twenty-two and one-half plus six, or twenty-eight and one-half volts. By moving the slider on the potentiometer we can get any value from twenty-two and one-half to twenty-eight and one-half volts. Where you have an adjustable B battery down to sixteen and one-half volts you then have a wide range of voltage suitable to the most critical detector.

It has been found more satisfactory to connect the rheostat in the negative lead of the filament when the grid return is connected to the positive sde of the A battery. Then any variation in the filament current does not affect the potential of the grid as much as when the rheostat is placed in the positive lead. A detector seems to work better when the A battery makes the grid slightly positive. In the case of an amplifier it is different, for, as long as the grid of the amplifier tube remains positive, distortion will take place. In many cases it is necessary to give the grid a negative potential with respect to the filament and the grid return is connected to the negative of the A battery, while the negative of the B is connected to the positive of the A battery. This is shown in Figure 2. The negative side of the filament contains the rheostat, and where a six-volt battery is used and the tube only requires five volts, there will be a one-volt drop in the filament rheostat and a negative bias will be placed on the grid.

Another means of placing a negative potential on the grid is to use a C battery, consisting of flashlight cells. This should be placed as near the negative filament as possible. This voltage will vary with the tubes used and also the plate voltages applied. Still another means of obtaining the best value of grid potential is shown in Figure 3. This shows a potentiometer shunted around the A and C battery with the center contact going to the grid. It is advisable to use a cutout switch in this circuit as the C battery will soon be used up.

When telephones are used a plate potential of sixty volts on the amplifier will be sufficient, as the C battery has a tendency to increase the intensity of signals over certain ranges of frequency, and unless high-grade transformers are used there will be distortion due to amplifier operating stronger on certain frequencies than on others.

POINTERS

If you live in the suburbs, stations within 500 miles will come in very good on an audion.

In using WD-12 tubes better results will be obtained by connecting the negative B and positive A to the grid return.

If vibration causes tube noises, a rubber sponge under the socket will eliminate it.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— BY HOWARD R. GARIS —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BETTY'S BALL

Once upon a time Betty Ringtail, the little girl raccoon, stood in front of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, crying as though her cute little heart might be broken into pieces.

"My goodness Betty!" called the rabbit gentleman as he saw the tears splashing on the walk, "whatever is the matter? Are you hurt? Has anything happened to your brother Bobby?"

"Oh, no, Uncle Wiggily," sobbed Betty. "Bobby's al—all—right. And I—I'm all right, too' ceptin' I'm now cry—cry—cryin' cause I haven't any nice big rub—bub—bubber ball to bounce!"

"Oh, so you're crying because you have no rubber ball to bounce; is that it, Betty?" asked Uncle Wiggily, trying not to laugh.

"Yes, ma'am—I mean, yes, sir, that's it!" cried Betty.

"Well, dry your tears, for I am going to get you a fine, big, rubber bouncing ball!" laughed the rabbit uncle. "Come along with me!"

"Oh, but I didn't ask for it—did I, Uncle Wiggily?" Betty quickly inquired.

"No, you didn't ask me for it, Betty."

"'Cause my mother wouldn't let me do that," went on Betty with a smile. "But I thought maybe if I cried and boo-hooed in front of your bungalow and if you asked me what was the matter and I said I wanted a rubber ball—I thought maybe you'd get me one. But I didn't ask for it, did I?" and the little raccoon girl seemed very anxious about this.

"No, you didn't ask me for it!" chuckled Mr. Longears. Then he hopped with Betty to the ten and eleven cent store and there Uncle Wiggily bought the finest red rubber bouncing ball he could find.

"Oh, now I'll have some fun!" laughed Betty Ringtail, and she threw the rubber ball down on the ground, "ker-bingo!"

Up bounced the ball, and as it rose it hit Uncle Wiggily on the end of his pink and twinkling nose.

"Oh! exclaimed Betty.

"Oh!" grunted the rabbit gentleman feeling of his nose.

"I'm so sorry!" apologized Betty. "I didn't mean to do that."

"I know you didn't—it's all right," laughed the bunny.

Once more Betty bounced her ball. Down on the ground it went, "kersmacko!" and up it bounded.

Again it struck the rabbit gentleman on his nose.

"Oh!" gasped Betty.

"Oh!" grunted Uncle Wiggily. "I guess my nose must be growing extra large, Betty," he said. "It gets in the way of your bouncing ball so often."

"No, it's my fault," said Betty. "I'll try and be more careful." So she bounced her red ball a little way off from Uncle Wiggily, while the bunny gentleman sat on a stump and read the paper.

And then, all of a sudden, out from the woods came the Bushy Bear. He was hungry and he was sliding his red tongue over his sharp white teeth. When the Bear saw Uncle Wiggily the Bear growled:

"Now for ears to nibble."

But Betty saw the bad chap coming and, holding her red ball in her cute little paws, she skipped up to the Bear and said:

"Before you nibble Uncle Wiggily's ears, Mr. Bear, watch me bounce my new rubber ball. Watch me, Mr. Bear!"

"Oh!" grunted the rabbit gentleman.

The Bear looked at Betty. The little girl raccoon threw the round rubber ball down hard on the ground. Up it bounced "kerslapo!" and it struck the Bear hard on the end of his soft and tender nose.

"Oh, wowzie! Bowzie!" howled the Bear, rubbing his nose with his paws. "Oh, what a trick to play on me! Oh, now I'll have nose bleed!" and away he ran, not stopping to nibble any ears that day.

"I'm a good ball bouncer, aren't I, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Betty.

"Indeed you are! You saved my ears, and I thank you," laughed the rabbit. Then he played bouncing ball with Betty until it was time to go home to supper, and he had some cabbage shortcake with carrot lemonade sauce on. So every one was happy except the Bear.

And if the egg beater doesn't run a race with the potato masher and fall into the gravy boat, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the crow.

BILLY WHISKERS

by FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

You remember yesterday Stubby was telling how his new mistress greeted him after his bath. He went on to say, "She took me on her lap, and I stood perfectly still while she tied and retied the ribbon to get it just to suit her. And I thought what a lot of time was lost over an ugly old bow that would be rumpled the first time I ran under a couch or chair. At last it was fixed to her satisfaction and as she was about to put me down, she said:

"'Andelusia must be ill today. She has forgotten and put toilet water in your bath, and I told her I preferred to put the same kind of perfume on your silky hair as I used on my handkerchief.'

"Saying this, she walked to the dresser and taking up a tall, slender, cut-glass bottle of perfume dashed it all over me until I smelt like a sachet bag.

"Ugh! How I hate strong perfume of any kind! And here I was drenched with it, and no matter how hard I ran, I could not run away from the smell of it, for where I went, it went too. I decided in my own mind to roll in the first mud puddle I found, to take the odor away, and then the next think I would do would be to tear off that hateful crimson bow of ribbon sticking up at the back of my neck like the bows do on the little girls' heads.

"'Come little Yellow Pull, for that is what I am going to call you, for I do not know your real name, and we will go for a ride in the victoria along the sea and up to the big hotel at the top of the mountain to see the view and call on a friend. Then we will come home by the long way that leads by the cemetery and hospital and all the public buildings, and you shall sit beside me.'

"Taking me in her arms, she descended the stairs I came up when I entered the house. At the bottom waited a stylisn victoria, drawn by glossy black horses with silver mounted, monogramed harness and on the box seat sat a coachman and footman in livery.

"As she stepped in the victoria, the doors of the courtyard were thrown open and we drove out into the bright sunshine, where everything sparkled and shone like diamonds.

"But even the shiny harness did not outshine the sparkle of my mistress's eyes. Everyone we passed turned and loked after the beautiful lady and the elegant equipment. But for all that, I made up my mind that I would jump off the low seat and escape the minute we came to a spot that loked like a good hiding-place for though she was kind and beautiful, I could not live in the lap of luxury. I prefer the life of a tramp to that of a lap dog.

Three o'clock in the morning. Browne let himself noiselessly into his flat, tiptoed to the bedroom and started to undress silently in the dark, says Judge.

He thought, perhaps, he could creep into bed without disturbing dear wife. Although, of course, he really should have known better than to think such a happening was possible. For suddenly Mrs. Browne spoke:

"Hello! Been playing cards again?"

"Yes, dear."

"And how much are you in?"

"I'm all in—move over!"

Timely Views of World Topics

"WORLD LEAGUE'S FIRST DUTY TO PROMOTE CO-OPERATION," SAYS PRESIDENT

More than an institution, more than simply an organized body, the League of Nations is a state of mind, Augustin Edwards, Chilian minister to Great Britain and president of the League Assembly, asserted recently.

Failure of the league to interfere in the "burning problems" of Europe, unless its action is sought, is not a sign of its weakness or impotency, Senor Edwards said.

"Those who belong to the league," he declared, "have the consciousness of the necessity of preserving this newly created instrument for the work of international co-operation which is its prime and essential object. The league cannot run the risk of blunting this instrument which cost so much sacrifice to create.

"Until the principles for which the league stands are instilled into the minds of people of the whole world, the league must be content with promoting international co-operation along the lines of least resistance. When we can convince nations not now members of the league that no surprises, no unexpected nor overwhelming engagements will be sprung on them suddenly, there will be no doubt of their decision to join."

Asserting that the idea of the league as a super-state was a bogey, Senor Edwards continued:

"No one dreams of converting the league into an instrument to overrule free and independent governments. In its three years' existence I do not remember a single instance in which the league took a step to intrude in the political relations of its members. Nor do I remember any instance in which the seventeen American republics that are members of the league found themselves drawn into the turmoil of European problems.

"I am an American," he said—"a Chilean—and I belong to the American family. I believe that all American nations should see eye to eye on all important questions. If we are free and strong it is because we have held together. No matter what has been said about the Monroe Doctrine, no matter what criticism has been hurled at it, there is no question that it represents the American sentiment that America should be for Americans, both north and south."

Problem of United States

It is for the United States to decide whether to join the league or the International Court at The Hague, Senor Edwards averred, and no foreigner has the right to attempt to influence that decision. In the case of the World Court, he explained, the gulf between nations was less wide since there could be only one law based on morals. Later in his remarks he said the Pan-American Congress in Santiago, Chili, over which he presided, might be called a complement of the League of Nations.

A young man in a tight suit with spring bottom trousers said to a clerk in a music store:

"What jazz tune is that girl playing in the back of the store?

"That ain't no tune," the girl replied. "That's one of the clerks dustin' off a piano."—Youngtown Telegram.

EDWARD PAGE GASTON

His search for the remains of Pocahontas, Indian princess, has brought Edward Page Gaston, archeologist and journalist, into the limelight internationally. He has located the graveyard in which she is believed to have been buried and is now seeking her bones.

E. P. GASTON.

Gaston has been in England for years, lecturing on archeological subjects. He has been interested in such research work since he joined the Hemenway expedition in 1888 to search the ruins in Arizona and New Mexico. Later he lived among the Zuni Indians to obtain data on their lives, customs and origin.

He combined his journalistic work with his other adventures. He founded the Pan-American news agency in Mexico City and also served as an attache at the American legation there. He was a member of the expedition that climbed Popocatepetl volcano, 11,775 feet above sea level. For years while lecturing extensively in Europe and America he contributed to magazines and for a time was European manager for Funk & Wagnalls Company, publishers.

Early in the world war he was attached to the American embassy in Berlin. He visited nearly 70,000 prisoners of war held by the British and Germans and acted voluntarily for the British and German governments. He advised the American war department on welfare measures for American prisoners in Germany.

He was born in Henry, Ill., November 19, 1868. He is a brother of Lucy Page Gaston, anti-cigaret advocate, and has himself been interested in the prohibition movement, having founded the International Prohibition Confederation. He is a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, London.

GOV. CHARLES C. MOORE

The career of Governor Charles C. Moore of Idaho stands out as an inspiration to the farm boys of his home state and other states. For the chief executive, who took office last year, started life on the farm and remained there while obtaining his early education. It was not until he entered normal school that he was relieved of his part of the routine work of the home farm.

Moore was born in Holt county, Missouri, fifty-six years ago. After graduating from normal school he became a teacher. His first experience in public office was as county recorder of his home county. He moved to Idaho when a young man.

The upper Snake River Valley was then the Mecca of homeseekers and young Moore went into that district. He taught St. Anthony school there one winter. He eventually acquired considerable acreage in the district and was prospering until the World War, with its producing and buying difficulties, caused him to lose most of his earnings.

His first important public office was as a state legislator in the Idaho house for two sessions, beginning in 1902.

Tourists Overwhelm Japanese Hostelries

TOKIO, July 6.—Despite the opening of the new Imperial Hotel of Tokio during the summer of 1922, so numerous have been the tourist parties reaching Japan during the present season that hotel accommodations are again inadequate here. Tourists from the United States have been forced to put their names on a waiting list for consideration at the Imperial Hotel, and in the end have found it necessary to stay at the Tsukiji Seiyoken or the Tokio station hotels, both of the latter less conveniently located.

Officials of the Japan Tourist Bureau estimate there will be 35,000 tourists in Japan in 1923, since 7,000 tourists registered in Japanese hotels during the first three months of the year. Changed economic conditions in Europe and the United States are given by the officials here as the reason for the great influx of tourists.

EAGLE ROCK

JUNE'S PERMITS TOTAL $130,000

Good Showing Being Made In Construction; Club News and Personals

Eagle Rock's building permits for the month of June totaled $130,000.

While no records have been broken, realtors consider the showing good for the season, as the month of June is frequently inactive in this respect.

The total of permits issued during the month was seventy-four, of which forty-three were for garages. The balance ran the whole range from minor improvements and additions to several large residences and business structures.

It is thought that the reason for the large number of garages may be attributed to the Los Angeles ordinance prohibiting the parking of cars in front of residences after the "zero hour" of 1 o'clock in the morning.

The desk hours of the plumbing and building permit department at the "city hall" are given as from 8 to 10 o'clock each morning. At other hours the inspectors are understood to be in various sections of the city, examining work under way.

Club News and Notes

The following officers have been elected for the coming year by the Women's Missionary Society of the Congregational church: Miss A. M. Green, president; Mrs. A. U. Lawrence, vice-president; Mrs. A. S. Elde, secretary, and Mrs. Jean France, treasurer.

It is planned during the coming year to appropriate funds for sending a delegate to the Congregational church Young People's Conference, in session at Pomona College, Claremont.

Mrs. Clara S. Ellis of West Mariposa avenue has been reinstalled as a director of the Southern California Women's Press Club. This honor came to Mrs. Ellis during the progress of the club's picnic last Tuesday on the grounds of Mrs. Helen C. Gaut, Arroyo drive, Pasadena. One of the features of this gathering was a sunset supper, under the oak trees, with a cheerful campfire burning and a fine program of music and recitations.

Personal Notes

Miss Dorothy Jarvis, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Wood, of 117 Eddy avenue, is planning to attend summer school in Los Angeles, preparatory to teaching in the fall. Miss Jarvis recently came to Eagle Rock from the east.

Thompson & Watson of 208 South Central avenue were official photographers for the fortieth annual convention of the Women's Missionary societies of the United Presbyterian church, held in Los Angeles recently.

Miss Lucile Crosby, from Ellwood city, Pa., and Miss Grace Rodger, from Pittsburg, Pa., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Van Lee Hood of 421 South Central avenue.

TUJUNGA

FIRE THREATENS BUSINESS BLOCK

Flames Destroy Workshop Of Cleaning Plant When Liquid Ignites

A fire broke out Tuesday in a building in the rear of the Tujunga Dry Cleaning works that threatened several business houses for a time when a large gasoline storage tank also took fire. It is believed that the fire started when the cleaning fluid that was being used by one of the employes of the dye works suddenly burst into flames.

The building is a small one used for a work-shop where the cleaning was done and was soon enveloped in flames. The heat caused the solder in the gasoline tank to melt and the tank took fire, but did not explode.

Reverend Harry P. Herdman of the African Inland Mission will speak at the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the Community church at Legion hall Sunday morning, July 8, at 9:45 and also at the 11 o'clock services at the church. His subject will probably be the human side of his work.

Fix Size of Church

The church officials have recommended to the congregation that the first unit of the building extension be 72x74 feet and one-story high. A vote will be taken on this recommendation and, if favorable, the ground may be broken for the foundation in about two weeks.

The Christian Endeavor held its regular meeting last Sunday evening. Owing to the absence of Rev. Glenn Moore at the Christian Endeavor convention at Long Beach, Rev. C. E. Bodenhausen was in the pulpit at the evening services.

There will be a district Christian Endeavor rally in Big Tujunga canyon next Sunday at 3 p. m. The reports of the state convention at Long Beach will be given.

The Spray home on Sunset boulevard, recently sold to George Davidson Gilmore of Los Angeles, is being remodeled and improved.

Mrs. C. B. Wade spent last week visiting at the home of Dr. Boyer of North Orange street, Glendale.

The Episcopal church bus is at the disposal of any who will telephone the name and address to Mrs. Raymond Hatch. Services are at 11 o'clock and on Fridays the Woman's Guild serves luncheon at Guild hall at 1 o'clock.

BURBANK

SUNSET COUNTRY CLUB NOW OPEN

Manager Says Watchman Not Necessary; Public Put Upon Honor

"The watchman at the gate" has been removed from the portals to the Sunset Canyon Country Club, and visitors as well as members may now go freely about the beautiful grounds.

This is just one more instance of where Manager Bridges of the club is effecting economy. Finding this factotum holding forth at the entryway and antagonizing not only visitors but members, in carrying out a duty imposed by the former managers, Mr. Bridges decided that $90 a month paid in salary to this individual could well be eliminated from the budget, so he abolished the position of watchman at the gate.

Previously, even members had been heckled as they attempted to enter, and had on more than one occasion been sent home to get their membership cards.

All this is now a thing of the past, Manager Bridges states, explaining that while visitors are not expected to take possession of the club house, golf course and other club facilities of like nature, there can surely be no objection in allowing them to drive up the canyon, looking over grounds, club house and the many other points in interest that abound in the picturesque surroundings.

Drug Company Locates

It is the plan of the Lewis Drug Company, which has secured two corners in Burbank and is negotiating for a third, to develop and operate a chain of drug stores embracing the entire San Fernando valley.

The nucleus for the new company is the Lewis pharmacy, at the corner of San Fernando boulevard and Angeleno avenue. Application for incorporation papers names among the incorporators H. W. Lewis. Capitalization of the new company will be $150,000.

A second location for the chain will be a store in the Florence hotel, at the corner of San Fernando boulevard and Verdugo avenue. Ten-year leases have been signed in both locations.

Personal Notes

Mr. and Mrs. William Howell of Tujunga avenue are entertaining their friends, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Rains, from Council Bluffs, Iowa. The Rains left Iowa with the intention of making Southern California their home and are much impressed with Burbank as that particular portion of the Southland in which to settle.

Mrs. Cama E. Fulton, a teacher in the John Muir school, is on an extended trip east. She will stop en route at Denver, where she was formerly a teacher, and will go on to Boston and New York before returning to Burbank.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roos and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stafford, from Wilkesbarre, Pa., recently called upon the LaPasks and the Kendigs, who are eastern friends.

Receives Discharge

Earl Malone, who has been in the U. S. navy for four years, has received his discharge and is now home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Malone, 313 Tujunga avenue. The young sailor was stationed in Cuba for considerable of his enlistment period.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Morrison recently visited Mrs. Morrison's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, of Front street, while en route for the Yosemite valley.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Dodd have come from Canada to live in Burbank and have moved into a house on Fairmont street, after stopping for some time with Mrs. Dodd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Shearer, of Providencia avenue.

Old Trolley Quits After 35 Years

NORWALK, Conn., July 6.—No longer will the "Toonerville trolley" transport passengers to the popular shore resorts of Dorlon's Point and Calfpasture, each on Long Island sound. The vehicle that long annoyed local residents and hurt their pride severely has just been retired after running continuously for thirty-five years except when snowdrifts of an unusually high tide interrupted its progress along the rails. The Connecticut company, erstwhile "child" of the New Haven railroad, found enough money to buy a new car for the run, hauling the old car away for a memento of olden days in trolley life.

A new canal recently built in Holland, about forty-two miles long, eight feet deep and a surface width of seventy-one feet, at a cost of approximately $10,000,000, connects Zuid-Willems canal with Geertruidenberg.

Dropped in Passing

Today's Short Story, by Ad Schuster

Curly Thomas sat on the floor of a flat car in a circus train. His back was against the wheel of a stake wagon over which the tarpaulins had been drawn tight to keep out the rain. In this place he had chosen it was dry enough. That is all he could say for it. He listened to the rain as it slapped on the canvas, to the rhythmic pounding of wheels on rails and asked himself, over and over, why he had taken up this life. It was no place for a man of spunk and ambition and now the others had ostracised him. He wondered what they were going to do.

"I'll stick it out and show them," the boy said, setting his jaw, "besides, what else is there to do?"

Three years before Curley had felt the call to adventure. It was tiresome work, selling pots and pans with Old Dobson and Mary, journeying from town to town in the day coaches, ringing doorbells and delivering the same speech over and over. And yet, Dobson had always been fair, and Mary—? She must be a young woman now.

Dobson was the nearest to a father Curly had ever known. The old man had taken him in charge years ago, raised him as a son and when the pot and pan business was started, the three, Dobson, Curly and Mary, took the road together. There came a time when the boy thought a peddler's job beneath him and when he tired of listening to the older man's plans for a store when there should be money enough. Hot weather, heavy dust, and the spell a circus works on youth caused him to leave one night. "They'll get along better without me," he excused himself, "and when I get rich I'll look them up."

Curly did not get rich and it was not because he did not try. A roustabout in a circus has little chance for advancement. The lad was not a musician nor a performer. All he could do was show his willingness for the job at hand. He strove to please and worked so hard as to incur the dislike of his fellows. That was the start of a breach which had widened. Now Curly sat alone under a stake wagon and there was no one who would ride with him. The wind blew and he thought of Old Dobson and Mary.

A motion behind the lonely boy attracted his attention. A hand, all wet, shoved a ball of paper inside and disappeared. Curly thrust his head outside and saw a man in a shiny black slicker making his way to the car ahead. "That'll be Oscar," he thought, "must be something important to make him—" The boy's eyes widened in fear as the import of the message dawned on him. The note could only mean one thing. His hands trembled as he spread out the crumpled paper to verify his suspicions.

"Throw this over when you you read it," the paper read. "They're going to redlight you at midnight."

The boy struck a match and looked at his watch. He had two hours. Outside were desolate plains and rain. He would ride a while longer. Stories of other men who had been red-lighted came to mind. He had thoughts they were all wild yarns to frighten the greenhorns and now he knew better. At 12 o'clock, if he stayed on the train, they would come and get him, would throw him off the moving train where, if he were lucky enough, he might lie and watch the rear lights go by and disappear. Red-light—it was more like murder!

After a while the boy unfastened a part of the canvas that he could look out toward the car in front. Unless he came to a town, he decided, he would ride to the last minute. He blinked and set his face against the rain.

They looked like animals as they crawled toward him in the dark and the rain splashed on their backs. They moved slowly and carefully as they crossed from one car to the other. Curly rolled out from under the wagon, swung over the side of the car and found himself tumbling down a bank. The red light flashed by. He felt himself all over, got up and limped toward a light less than a quarter of a mile away. He was in the outskirts of a small town and this house was the only one which was lighted.

"Well, if it isn't Curly!" said Old Man Dobson when the boy entered, blinking. "Didn't I tell you, Mary, he'd come back some day? Turn in, boy, and help us tie up these holiday packages." There were no questions. The old man went on with his work while Mary, a wonderful Mary, sensing his needs, went to the kitchen to prepare a lunch.

"We have a store here," Dobson said as they ate, "and we need you if you'll stay." Curly looked at Mary and nodded. He wondered if he were dreaming.

"I'll be glad to," he said. "I've decided to quit the circus business for good."

With the Women of Today

by Edith Moriarty

The story of Mrs. Hannah J. Kempfer, representative of Otter Tail county in the state of Minnesota, is reminiscent of "From Log Cabin to White House," and Lives of Lincoln.

Mrs. Hannah J. Kempfer

Born on a ship of which her mother was stewadress on the north sea, Norway, she was taken by the ship's missionary to a foundlings' home at Stavanger. Later she was adopted by some good people named Jenson and when she was six years old they emigrated to America bringing her with them. Hardship followed hardship for the family. At six years of age little Hannah and her younger brother helped earn the rent for the home by pumping water for thirty horses in a nearby pasture. At twelve she was forced to go to Fergus Falls, the nearest town to secure work to help the family finances. She was determined to secure the necessary education for teaching, so in spite of little food and poor clothing she managed to go to school. Doing washings on Saturday, helping serve at parties, any odd jobs she could do were faithfully done, and at sevetnteen she took the teachers' examinations, passed and secured a school.

She was a successful teacher and because she knew what it was to be hungry she arranged to have hot meals served to her pupils. Her school was known as the "Hot Soup School." After ten years of teaching she married a young farmer, Charles Kempfer. From that time on she interested herself in the work and problems of the farm.

In November, 1922, she was elected to the Minnesota legislature, the first woman from the country districts to be elected in her state. She says that she enjoyed the work, attended every session and was always on time. She served on the following committees: Markets and Marketing, Public Welfare, Education, Public Health and Hospitals, Game and Fish and State and County Fairs. She feels that women are not going to be as loyal to parties as men have been. That with them it will be the merits of the bill to be passed, not the party backing it.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

"THAT'S GRATITUDE"

A business man I know is planning a rather unusual advertising campaign based on his knowledge of human nature.

He makes a certain article of which the quality has always been justly famous. He faces at present the necessity of raising the price or of lowering the quality. He does not want to do either. The only way out is to decrease the overhead by increasing output. And his plan is to put this whole situation up to the users of his article, tell them that that is the only way to prevent price going up or quality going down, and ask them if they don't want to help him keep the price and quality the same by recommending the article to their friends.

Let Them Be Creditors

He bases his hopes of this plan partly on the idea that people will readily see that that is the only way to keep the price of this high quality article down, and partly on his belief that if they do help him they will have a kindly feeling for him just because they have done something for him.

"There's an old idea," he says, "that to make people like you, you should do something for them to win their gratitude. Nothing to it! People don't like to have to feel grateful. It makes them feel uncomfortable. It's a much better stunt to let them do something for you. Then they will like you. People love to feel they deserve gratitude."

It will be interesting to see how his campaign comes out.

Both from the point of view of its business value and from the point of view of his philosophy.

I have heard somewhat similar ideas expressed about gratitude before, and the older I grow the more I come to agree with them.

I think gratitude, as an emotion, is one of the least common of the virtues.

When I say, as an emotion, I mean to draw a distinct line between an emotion that fills the heart and an idea that fills the mind.

People may know in their minds that they ought to feel gratitude and yet not really feel it with their hearts at all.

It is very hard to forgive the person who puts us under an obligation.

Who Likes Debts?

The familiar phrase, "a debt of gratitude," testifies to the way we feel about gratitude. It's a debt. And debts are irksome things.

People who have reasons for being grateful to other people are apt to be extra critical of the conduct of those others toward them. Why? Because they want to find some offense which they can claim cancels the debt. They know they ought to feel grateful, they don't want to frankly admit that they have no such feeling, and so they rationalize their lack of the emotion by finding fault with the people toward whom they ought to have it.

"Those who make us happy," says a French writer of the old days, "are always thankful to us for being so; this gratitude is the reward of their benefits."

Somewhat different from the conventional ideas about gratitude. But I can't help thinking it is the kind of gratitude which is the most commonly and keenly felt.

Tomorrow—Some Startling Figures

A negro called upon an old friend, who received him in a rocking chair and continued to rock himself to and fro in a most curious way, chronicles Tit-Bits.

"Yo' ain't sick, is yo', Harrison?" asked the caller, anxiously.

"No, I ain't sick, Mose," said Harrison.

There was a moment's silence, during which the caller gazed wide-eyed at the rocking figure.

"Den," continued Mose, "why does yo' rock yo'self dat way all de time?"

Harrison explained:

"Yo' know Bill Blott? Well, he sold me a silver watch cheap, an' if I stops moving like dis, dat watch don't go"

The new "Sealing Wax Work" seems to be growing in popularity with every new day. Here are some of the things I have recently seen decorated with colored sealing wax:

A Sealing Wax Bag-Top—A clever woman of my acquaintance originated this idea: She went to a five-and-ten-cent store and bought a nickel bag-top and chain-handle (the kind to which one sews velvet to make a handbag). This metal top was decorated with raised flowers. She was not satisfied with her purchase, so thought she would try covering the entire thing (except the link-chain) with different colored sealing wax. She simply heated sticks of black, dark blue, gold and dark green sealing wax and daubed these onto the metal bag-top in a hit-or-miss pattern, making the splotches about the size of a dime. Proceed as follows: Hold the daubed bag-top over the flame a minute or two, to remelt the wax so that it spreads and blends. Make a brown velvet bag to attach to this bag-top.

A Sealing Wax Flower Bowl—Any prettily shaped pottery bowl or vase may be used to cover with sealing wax. Put on the wax in daubs, then hold the vase over the flame, to blend the wax and glaze it.

How to Paint with Sealing Wax—Put small pieces of sealing wax in a saucepan and heat slowly till melted. Then, to three parts of this melted wax add one part of denatured alcohol (which keeps the wax soft). Use as any paint.

Powder-Puff Holder for the Bureau—Take a long-stemmed wine glass or fruit cup large enough to hold a powder-puff. Put small sealing-wax roses around the top rim of this glass and on the flat glass disc at the bottom. To make these roses put a tiny drop of melted sealing wax on the glass, make a hole in the center of this drop (using a steel nut-pick), then make three slashes in the drop around the hole. Sometimes just a figure "S" will give the effect of rose-petals on one of these tiny roses. Cluster the rose-beads close together, making one blue rose, one yellow and one pink (or lavender). Make a tiny green leaf at one side. Tie a pink bow to the ivory ring at the top of the powder-puff, and place the puff in its decorated glass holder.

Beauty Chats

by Edna Kent Forbes

SUMMER FOOT TREATMENTS

I've headed this Chat "summer foot treatments" because I want to emphasize the fact that the feet need different care in the hot weather, from what they do when it's cold. For one thing, they are apt to swell with the heat, and they perspire more readily. But it's the best time to treat them if they've been painful or unhealthy, for in summer you wear low light shoes, which permit greater ventilation, and you can wear canvas slippers, which come nearer the ideal—the ideal being a sandal.

About treatments—if the feet perspire, powder them every day or twice a day. Use the fine sort of talcum made for babies, it's pure and soothing and any amount can be used. If you can't afford this, or if your feet are not very sensitive, take some laundry starch, sift the powder from the lumps—crush the lumps to make more powder—and mix one ounce of boracic acid powder to every six or eight of the starch. This is cooling, soothing and antiseptic, and better than baby powder if the feet have a strong odor. In this case, however, use half starch and half boracic.

Sea bathing is very good for the feet, it makes them less tender, it is more cleansing than even soap and water, it does wonders in preventing corns. But, if there are corns, follow the usual treatment. Soak the feet in hot water, preferably with bath salts added, or soda, cut or file off the callous, paint with collodion, rub every day afterwards with cold cream.

It is a good plan to rest the feet during the hot weather by wearing low broad heel canvas oxfords, and for dress-up, low heel canvas pumps, or plain kid sandals with heels as low as possible.

Blacky—You can reduce the muscles of your face through massage, but only use enough oil on the tips of the fingers to act as a lubricant. If you cannot have this work done for you, be sure to learn all about the movements before you attempt them yourself; else you may stretch the skin or otherwise injure the contour of the face.

Mrs. F. H. W.—Diluted lemon juice, or that from cucumbers, will be all the bleach necessary for ordinary tanning. Always follow this treatment with cream or an oil application, as all bleaches neutralize the natural skin secretions leaving them parched if not supplied with an oil.

Winifred—As you are too stout in so much of the body, a general

Treat your feet intelligently reduction through the diet would be best for you in attaining a better proportioned figure.

DIET FOR CHILDREN—AND ADULTS

Milk, No. 1

(The Adorable Sockums has donated to Dr. Peters his space in this column for a few weeks, for a series of articles on Milk. There will be six papers in this series, one each Friday—save them; they are important, and cannot be sent you later. Following this series, Sockums will continue his illuminating "Confessions of a Baby." —The Editor.)

As milk is the one indispensable food of infancy and childhood, and almost as indispensable for adults, it is important that you know a good deal about it. I will publish a series of articles on this subject every Friday for a while. Cut these out and save them, mothers.

I have already explained about the complete proteins of milk, especially adapted for growth, and I have told you about its wonderful calcium and phosphorus and vitamins. I haven't spoken of its carbohydrate content, and that is important, too. Its carbohydrate, in the form of milk sugar, is easy to digest and has a favorable influence on the bacterial flora of the intestines.

Milk is just as wholesome for adults as it is for children. The longest-lived and most virile peoples in the world, the pastoral Arabs and other pastoral people of Europe and Asia, subsist largely on milk. When Metchnicoff first called attention to this he thought their longevity and virility were due to the lactic acid bacteria in the soured milks they drank. We know now that it is the milk itself, and not its souring bacteria, that is effective. A pint a day for adults and a quart, usually, for normal children should be the allowance in the household. Buy less meat and more milk, mothers! It is really less expensive.

Now I have told you the importance of milk, I must tell you the importance of its being good milk. The following is a quotation from Roseneau's Preventive Medicine and Hygiene:

"Milk is probably responsible for more sickness and deaths than perhaps all other foods combined. There are several reasons for this: (1) Milk conveys a greater variety of infections than any other food. Bacteria grow well in milk; therefore, a very slight infection may produce widespread and serious results. (2) Of all foodstuffs, milk is the most difficult to obtain, handle, transport and deliver in a clean, fresh and satisfactory condition. (3) It is the most readily decomposable of all our foods. (4) Finally, milk is the only standard article of diet obtained from animal sources consumed in its raw state."

You can see from this the importance of clean, fresh and pure milk, especially for babies and children. One drink of stale milk may cause such a severe diarrhea that the child may have its intestinal tract irritated for a long while, and thus its resistance is lowered, and one drink of milk containing disease germs may give the baby or child the diseases which the germs are responsible for.

Because milk is so easily contaminated, do not ever buy from open cans. Selling milk from open cans should be prohibited.

Do not forget, mothers, that milk can be contaminated after it leaves the milk cart:

First, if the bottle of milk is left on the doorstep, cats and dogs may lap the top—as frequently happens—and flies, perhaps carrying disease germs, may alight on it. So, unless you carefully wash the top of the bottle with boiling water, or sterilize it by wiping with peroxide of hydrogen, when the milk is poured over the lip it may become contaminated.

Second, it may become contaminated by anyone in the household who handles it, if they are diseased, unless they are very careful.

All food must be protected from dust and insects, and especially must milk. Milk will absorb odors, which may not be harmful, but disagreeable. Unless milk is kept in the original bottle, it should be kept in a seamless, nonrusting dish. It must be placed in a refrigerator if possible—if not possible, then in a basin of cool, running water. If milk is to be kept over a day, and you have no ice chest, it is best to boil it and cool it as rapidly as possible under running water. If you use it the second day, boil it again before using.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a woman thirty-six years old and have been married to my present husband for about a year. My first husband died five years ago and I was left with the necessity of finding work without any previous experience. In looking over the newspaper advertisements I came across one which said that a widower, the father of three children, wanted a woman to come into his home as housekeeper and to look after the children.

I answered the advertisement and found that the man had had a great deal of trouble with housekeepers because they were not good to the children. The position paid well because the work all fell on the housekeeper except the washing. It seemed to me that I could fill the position well and so I took it. I have always loved children, but did not have any of my own.

My employer's children were naturally badly behaved because they had not had kind treatment from the time of their mother's death. Fortunately they and I got along well together and gradually I improved their behavior. Best of all they learned to love me devotedly and of course I loved them just as much.

Last year my employer asked me to marry him. He is a wonderful man and I had loved him for some time, and so I consented without realizing how his people would feel. Now my life could be completely spoiled if I would let it. His father and mother no longer come to our house, and all of his relatives think it is a disgraceful thing that he married his housekeeper. False stories are circulated to the effect that I am cruel to the children and a perfect tyrant with my husband. My husband takes my part and the more opposition he gets the more devoted he is to me.

I would do anything to win over my husband's people. Before our marriage they couldn't say enough nice things about me and I was invited to their homes occasionally. I can't see why they should turn on me so completely now. Can you suggest any way that I could win back their regard? Of course I am happy with my husband and the children, but I wonder how long my husband will be happy without the companionship of his family. MRS. R. B.

Devote yourself to your husband and children and think as little as possible about his people. They are entirely in the wrong, and therefore it is not your place to try to right matters. Since your husband's relatives have turned against him you will have to try doubly hard to make his home life sufficiently happy to make up for the other loss. Surely he appreciates what you are doing and would choose you any time in preference to his own people.

On the Spur of the Moment

A LITTLE SLICE O' LIFE

She stood on the roof
Of the house opposite,
Drying her hair in the sun.
Her locks floated in the breeze.
Being romantic, I imagined
That I was in ancient Spain.
This was perhaps Aberlada.
Her beautiful face and hair
Upset my commercial mind.
Her figure was wonderful
And her gestures as graceful
As those of a professional dancer.
I gazed at her a long time.
Determined to find out
Who she was, I haunted
The block all that day.
Late in the afternoon
She came out with a baby carriage.
She was the janitor's wife.
How could she have married him?
But she did.

The MacMillan expedition to the Arctic reports a glacial move southward which presages the beginning of a new ice age. It is believed the glaciers have advanced a couple of inches in the past seventy years, but the MacMillan expedition will make sure about this and will flash us the news in time to lay in a supply of coal and wool blankets. In time it is believed the ice will cover the United States, and, while it may be in a couple of million years, it might be just as well to get ready. It will be inconvenient, when it comes, no doubt, but it will at least give us a much needed laugh at the iceman who bangs on our door every morning at 6 o'clock and unhooks a gallon or so of water and leaves it in our refrigerator.

"You're losing your petticoat, aren't you, Henry?"

The prominent man, not understanding, gazed inquiringly at the banker, who continued: "What's that white thing hanging below your trouser legs?"

The man looked down. His face colored and he stepped back into the director's room. When he came out he walked briskly past the bank president, who called: "Here, why don't you explain?"

Coming close, the other whispered: "Simply forgot to take off my pajamas when I got out of bed this morning."

ALL ANXIOUS TO FIGHT DEMPSEY

Firpo Seems to Think He Has Best Chance to Cop Championship

By JACK CARBERRY
For International News Service

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 6.—No longer need Jack Kearns and company bewail the business depression, which for two years has put Jack Dempsey on the inactive list.

Suddenly the woods have become filled with worthy challengers. Every "knight of the tin ear" tipping a beam at 175 pounds or more, is loudly clamoring for a battle date with the champion.

"Why shouldn't they—the next man who meets Dempsey will be champion of the world," Luis Angel Firpo, senor from Argentine, explained today.

Firpo sincerely believes he is the next king of the heavies. He is in training here for his July 12 meeting with Jess Willard, former champion. The fight will be staged at Tex Rickard's Jersey City arena. It will be a no-decision affair.

Firpo has affixed his name to a contract to battle Dempsey under Rickard's promotion in the event he defeats Willard. The Argentine mauler says Dempsey has also signed.

They Make Threats

"I'll knock Willard for a row of barbed wire fences," says Senor Firpo. Firpo will enter the ring against Willard at top weight—215 pounds. He looks heavier.

Willard will be down to 238—the lowest he has ever made.

"I won't need much of a left for Willard," Firpo insists.

"I can take them—all he's got. I'm going in for an early knockout."

Willard has expressed the same opinion of his ability against the senor.

The fight is expected to draw a half million dollar house. Tickets totalling $300,000 have already been sold.

Firpo is a two to one favorite.

CHICAGO, July 6.—All details for a meeting on Labor Day at Windsor, Ontario, between Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Harry Wills, negro challenger, have been completed, according to three eastern promoters who arrived in this city Thursday to await the expected arrival of Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, Saturday.

The match may be made for Tom Gibbons, it was stated, owing to his splendid showing July 4 at Shelby.

First Sackers In Merry Battle For National League Honors

By NORMAN E. BROWN

A battle within a battle is going on in the National league these days. Four husky first basemen are waging warfare with bat and glove for the honor of leading the league in their position. The quartet are:

Long George Kelly of the Giants.
Jim Bottomley of the Cardinals.
Stuffy McInnis of the Braves.
Charley Grimm of the Pirates.

Last year the veteran Jake Daubert, after living through the annual retirement stage, stepped out and led the whole durned league. But right behind his heels, snapping at them constantly, were Kelly and Grimm, who ran a dead heat as far as fielding was concerned. Both hit well, too.

Late in the season Mr. James Bottomley treked into St. Louis from Syracuse in the International league. Jim had knocked 'em stiff in the International circuit with his first basing. Finished just two little points behind old Ed Onslow, on first for Toronto. And what's two points?

Bottomley got a chance in thirty-four games with the Cards last fall—enough contests to sound a warning that he wanted the first basing job regularly. He got it. This year he is running nip and tuck with Kelly and Grimm for honors.

Bottomley stands out as the most spectacular player, both because of his dashing play and his meteoric rise.

Rickey picked him up two years ago on the sandlots of Nogomis, Ill., and, seeing in him a diamond in the rough, sent him to Syracuse. Jim liked that town, but couldn't see why he should stay there long.

Bottomley reminds one of Ty Cobb in his stance at the plate. He is alert and daring. When Rickey let Jack Fournier go to the Dodgers for Hi Meyers some of the conservative brothers shook a sorrowful head. There isn't a Dodger fan who can recall Jack's last name now.

Kelly Great on Assists

While Kelly and Grimm were tied in the official averages last year for clean fielding, Lanky George led the league in assists and continues to make that his specialty. He is a wizard on relaying long drives to right to catch runners at home.

Grimm cost the Pirates just $2500 after Barney Dreyfuss had spent close to $100,000 trying to buy a "real" first baseman. "Lefty" already has returned that dough to Barney at the turnstiles.

When Stuffy McInnis was presented with the tinware by the Cleveland club it looked for a minute as though his big league days were over. The Braves, however, grabbed at him. While he may not be the McInnis of a few years ago he is playing a whale of a game at first and hitting timely. There are half a dozen big league clubs that could use him.

In an eventful career as major and minor league ball player, Johnny Bassler has made many a play, good and bad, but it is likely that he never made a play similar to that which bobbed up in the fifth inning of a recent Tiger-Yankee game. With Ruth on first base, Bassler attempted to return a ball to the pitcher, but hit Pipp's bat squarely with the ball, which bounced back to the grandstand, and Babe went to second. Even Bassler had to grin at this most unusual incident.

Beals Becker, once a Giant and at other times a member of the Boston and Pittsburgh teams, is playing his twenty-first year at the national pastime. Beals just now is in left field for the Kansas City club and his stick work has done its share toward keeping the Blues in the lead of the season. Becker believes the pitchers of the old days were superior to those of the present day. "I found Christy Mathewson and Three Fingered Brown the hardest pitchers to hit," said Becker.

Zev, king of the three-year-olds, is rolling up a money won record that bids fair to equal Man o' War's great record of $249,465. Zev has performed six times this year and has been returned winner in five races, while in his other effort he finished next to last.

Zev has won the Paumonok Rainbow, Kentucky Derby, Withers and the Belmont stakes, which total to $143,000. He is just $106,000 behind the Riddle champion. The Rancocas colt is engaged in stakes worth more than $150,000, and if he continues to train sound and has no mishaps, the brown son of The Finn-Miss Kearney should land well over the $200,000 mark.

The Rancocas stable horses have won more than $196,000 to date, of which the three-year-old Zev is the biggest contributor. Had Rigel won the Carlton Stakes recently the stable's winnings would have gone over $200,000.

While the racing public believes this is a great amount of money it is not a drop in the bucket to what is needed to defray the expenses of the stable and the breeding farm. To campiagn a stable of thirty or more horses on a circuit means an outlay of more than $32,000 per month, which in six months' racing makes a total of $208,000. Then the expense of the breeding farm will total another $150,000, making a grand total of $358,000. That is why the Rancocas stable must have the best in order to break even on the year. The profits of the stable is in winning bets.

Cleveland Hurler Is Mystery to Detroit

CLEVELAND, July 6.—The Tigers found themselves unable to solve the delivery of Smith, Indians' hurler, and lost Thursday by the shut-out route, 10 to 0. Smith held the visitors to four hits. The Tribesmen connected safely eighteen times. The game was errorless.

Jess Barnes pitched one of his good games and the result was the Dodgers were whitewashed by the Braves.

Pick Dates to Hold Davis Tennis Matches

These dates were definitely assigned today for the matches. Japan and Australia are expected to be the contenders as they are picked to win over Canada and Hawaii easily in the preliminary round. Australia's team includes J. O. Anderson.

CRUCIAL BATTLE FOR LOCAL TEAM

Glendale-Lankershim Game On Sunday to Determine League Leadership

Glendale takes on Lankershim Sunday afternoon, July 8, at 2:30 o'clock, in the main event of the San Fernando Valley baseball league series. This will be Glendale's last league game of the season and will be played on the local grouuds at Park avenue and San Fernando road.

Glendale leads the league at the present time by a narrow margin and must win this game to stay on top. Manager Walt Heidler says his men have been working hard every night this week, in practice for the big event, and that the "get Lankershim" spirit means they are going to avenge that disastrous defeat that was pushed at them on the Lankership grounds in the first round of the league whirl.

Wants Big Turnout

This makes two good reasons, Walt says, why every baseball fan in the city should be on hand Sunday afternoon with the lusty lungs and the horny hands, to help his braves on to victory.

It is understood that the best umpire in the Southern California Baseball Managers' association will boss the proceedings. Manager Walt will do the twirling and Hersh Shrider, who has lately been showing some great stuff behind the bat, will receive his offerings.

A record crowd is expected to turn out for this concluding game of the league series—and says Walt "Customers are sure going to get their money's worth!"

Hornsby Scores Two More Circuit Clouts

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—Rogers Hornsby, last year's major league home run champion, added two circuit clouts to his 1923 record here yesterday. He hit his eighth homer of the season in the first inning of the St. Louis-Philadelphia game off Pitcher Weinert, and his ninth in the third inning. Weinert was again the victim.

Tris Speaker had a perfect day batting two doubles and two singles in as many times at bat. His men helped the good work along by drubbing the Tigers, 10 to 0.

The Athletics made ten hits but could not win from the Red Sox. As the result, the gap between Connie Mack's band and the Yanks has now widened to twelve games.

The WORLD OVER By FRANKLIN B. MORSE. PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

One of the long distance ocean yacht races that stands second to none in the ranks of blue ribbon aquatic races is the Santa Barbara-Honolulu competition over a course of approximately 3000 miles, a matter of fifteen days of sailing to cover.

This year's race will be started from Santa Barbara on July 21 at the noon hour and, thus far, nine yachts have been entered. It is possible that one or two more will be entered before the start.

Incidentally, the race will be started by Sir Thomas Lipton irrespective of whether he is in Santa Barbara or in the Balkans. Arrangements will be perfected to have him connected with the starting gun through the agencies of modern science so that his hand will be the one actually to send the craft over the starting line.

Among the entrants are Cecil B. DeMille, the motion picture producer whose colors will be carried by the Seaward. The Caprice, flagship of the Santa Barbara Yacht club, will be another contestant. A. R. Podder, commodore of that club, has entered his newly-christened Diablo. This boat formerly was the Haswell.

Other boats are the Idalia, owned by Eugene Overton, admiral of the Southern California Yachting association; Viking IV, owned by Admiral O. Soiland of the Pacific Coast Yachting association; the Uncas, belonging jointly to P. H. L. Wilson and John Powers.

It is a matter of regret among yachtsmen that there will be no Honolulu boat entered in the 1923 competition which gives promise of being the most interesting race sailed since the institution of the affair in 1906 by Clarence McFarlane. A thorough scouring of the Islands has revealed the fact that there is not a single available craft that would stand any chance against the company scheduled to make the 3000-mile run.

'Always, Hawaii has figured prominently in races of the past. In the 1912 race Prince Kalanianaole was a member of the crew of the Hawaii which distanced all competitors. To be out of the event this year has been a sad blow to all Hawaiians whether yachtsmen or landlubbers and the probabilities are that all hands will be spurred to see to it that something is done so that this state of affairs will not come about when the next race comes off. It has been suggested that a community yacht might be built to represent Honolulu and a popular subscription might solve the problem.

SPORTS CHATTER By BILL UNMACK PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

While in the United States, there is a steadily increasing number of feminine devotees to the game of golf, it appears that in the Hawaiian Islands the fair sex have not yet taken to the pastime in numbers commensurate with the acknowledged popularity of the game.

This discovery was made by R. W. Ball, professional at the Honolulu Golf club, a fairly recent arrival in the mid-Pacific from California. It was because of the great favor that golf has found among the girls and women of California that Ball at once noted the dearth of women players in the islands.

Ball ascribes the condition to the fact that the women folks of the Hawaiian Islands are afraid of the game. "The trouble lies chiefly in the fact that the women appear to think golf is a difficult game," he said. "Of course it is, if one wishes to play expert golf. But the beauty and fascination of the game is that with a little preliminary coaching anyone, not hopelessly feeble, can play and enjoy playing.

"I should like to see golfing husbands take their wives out at least once a week, to help them become interested in the greatest of games. There is no more healthful, enjoyable or fascinating game for men or women."

The more or less supercilious are likely to remark that, of course, as a professional who makes his bread and butter out of the game, Ball is going to advise just as he has been quoted above. Even granting that the professional should boost the game as a matter of policy for his own sake, the fact remains that Ball's reasons for women taking up the game is the exact truth. It would be the exact truth if there weren't a professional golfer left on earth.

It is a notable fact that many country clubs and other kinds of organizations which catered only to men, now have arranged so that women can participate in golf. A notable example of this is the big Olympic Club of San Francisco, which has a membership of approximately 5000 men. A few years ago this organization acquired a country annex to which was attached a fine links. Provision now has been made so that the feminine members of an Olympian's family can enjoy the courses at certain hours on stated days of the week.

Also, there have cropped up golf clubs made up exclusively of women. There are not many of these organizations but a few of them exist. They are not, likely, however, to become very widespread for the reason that it costs a lot of money to keep up a course and the aid of the men as members practically is an essential for the proper upkeep of the greens and fairways.

LOS AMIGOS CLUB HAS BIG PICNIC

Music, Dancing and Baseball Are Main Attractions At Monte Vista

Los Amigos club, an organization of employes of the sales department, Los Angeles branch, of the Union Oil Company of California, held their annual picnic at Monte Vista park Sunday.

Oversized, well packed lunch baskets were much in evidence. A portable Victrola and large selection of records furnished music for dancing under the great oaks in the morning, while everyone turned their attention to the ball game with Tujunga Valley in the afternoon.

Spark McCluskey of Glendale, a prominent member and past exalted ruler of the Jaw Bone society, a debating club, was very much present, displaying some of the latest millinery of the season. John Dewar was also with the Glendale delegation. L. R. Labory, president of the club, and family were present. Stanley A. Wilson, also an officer and active member of the club, had his family out to enjoy the outing.

Club's Principles

Los Amigos club is one with but one object—a steadying hand to a slipping brother. There are no elaborate rituals or initiations.

The qualifications are but two—a heart that is right and a hand that is ready. The dues are Friendship and Goodfellowship in equal parts, payable without demand. The countersign, a strong grip and a steady eye. Membership is limited to employes of the company.

SEES CHARM IN SMALL VOLUMES

Mrs. Alma J. Danford Of Local Library Tells How Editions Inspire

There is an unexplainable charm about a small book, no matter what the content, and Mrs. Alma J. Danford, librarian at the Public Library, has provided a real temptation for patrons in an attractive collection of "vest pocket editions" now at hand on the small table in the library.

Adding to the charm of these little books is the fact that they are familiar stories or poems that one likes better on each reading. Some of them will recall school days and will inspire re-reading of some beloved lines of childhood.

Deserve Re-reading

For instance, there are "vest pocket editions" of "Lays of Ancient Rome," by Macaulay; "Ballads of Reading Goal," by Oscar Wilde; "Bab's Ballads," by W. S. Gilbert; "The Greatest Thing in the World," by Henry Drummond; "Dreams," by Olive Schreiner; "Will o' the Mill," by Robert Louis Stevenson; "The Tempest," by Shakespeare; "The Coming of Arthur," by Alfred Tennyson; "The Happy Prince," by Oscar Wilde; "Fifty Best Poems of America"; "Man Without a Country," by Edward Everettt Hale; "Emerson's Essays"; "Fifty Best Poems of England"; "Midsummer Night's Dream," by Shakespeare; "Friendship," by Henry Thoreau; "Sherlock Holmes," by Sir A. Conan Doyle.

Steel Men's Promise Scored by Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Promises of steel manufacturers to President Harding that the twelve-hour day will be abolished will "bring little comfort to the men in the steel mills," Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, told International News Service late yesterday, commenting upon Mr. Harding's speech in Tacoma, Wash.

COLUMBIA CITY, July 6.—Under some circumstances relatives come in handy, the case of Charles Marker seems to indicate.

Marker and family left here recently by automobile for Independence, Ore. They planned to stop each night with relatives en route until they passed Yellowstone Park, Wyoming. The longest distance between stops was to be 25 miles.

President Off To Alaska
Drying Up The Ocean
Dr. Harrower Recognized
Something About Shows

By Gil A. Cowan

PRESIDENT HARDING and party are off for Alaska. What an interesting experience he will have, as well as a delightful rest. For anyone who has not sailed to the sky blue waters of the Bering sea there is still in store a thrill. And the very mention of the mystic northermost possession of these United States almost lures one to the land of sourdoughs and glaciers.

Bon voyage! And get back to the homeland on schedule so you will meet Glendale face to face on August 3, Mr. President.

Glendale guardsmen are leaving this week-end for two weeks' training at Salinas. Under the leadership of Captain J. H. Wittmeyer they are promised a big sports program in addition to their daily drill and rifle practice.

For those younger men who were unable to serve in the World War the National Guard encampment offers a fine opportunity to get an introduction into military life.

And for those who want to again appreciate the appetites evidenced on the "chow" line and get up with the sun and live the life of the soldier there is nothing like it.

Foreign liners have voluntarily eliminated their liquor stores on sailing for the United States. Prohibitionists may now claim that America is making the ocean dry.

Certainly they have made some towns on the desert "wet." The hill billies back of Barstow, in the San Bernardino desert believe the moonshine's best where the moon shines most.

And Heaven only knows where they get the mash for the makin's.

The writer was out on the desert last fall and there is one place for no prohibition agent. Only the buzzards would know where his body was after the numerous outlaws got through with him for invading the still hills. They call the stuff "cactus juice" out there, but cactus never was so bad as all that its juice is claimed to be, I was told.

Of course, we can hardly suspect the hill folks of this vicinity to engage in moonshining, yet they do say—

And from the looks of things southern California is no drier or wetter than elsewhere we have visited, with the possible exception of Sacramento.

Who can blame them for having their "hooch" in the capital city?

There is an old saw about "Prophets never being recognized by their own people." That seems to be particularly true regarding the ability of Dr. Henry R. Harrower, the noted physician who has lived in our midst for several years and builded a big business.

Interviewing R. E. Spicer of London, Eng., who is now financially interested in his great laboratory project here, this wealthy man from "across the pond" says:

"Dr. Harrower has been received in England and other European countries, generally, as being one of the foremost authorities in the world on the subject of endocrinology."

To the layman that means little, yet physicians will know that Dr. Harrower is as big a man in medicine as the Mayo brothers have become in surgery without impugning the ability of either.

Several "prominent citizens" lost $200,000 on the Dempsey-Gibbons fight, according to reports. How easy it is to have a successful failure. We know of a lot of them, newspapers in particular.

It is possible to fool some of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time. Shelby got its hat into the ring for a championship fight as a bit of tomfoolery.

And a lot of people got fooled. For instance, Mr. Dempsey found Tommy Gibbons an artful dodger. Mr. Kearns and others also were fooled. So were the sport writers, but the man who said Shelby would sink itself in a quagmire of debt was no fool. We believe Tex Rickard made the remark. But Tex had better not brag for he went down to South America and sank a few thousand pesos in the "Llano del Rio," if we recollect rightly.

At any rate, our old friend, Mason Peters, went along with him.

Mason Peters, whom we happened to mention, is one of the best known press agents that ever headed out in advance of a circus. And he has served some of the biggest of special counsel in settling claims.

"It's the morning after the show that the real circus takes place," according to Peters. The angry person who allowed the giraffe to nibble a straw hat cannot be salved with free tickets to a circus that is playing a hundred miles away. They crave real money, they do.

"Everyone thinks a showman has money and nothing else but," Major Peters confided in me. "We found it was cheaper to replace the articles they claimed were destroyed or lost rather than pay them estimated damages."

And then he wound off his spool of experience a hundred and one tales of people who tried to get the best of the showman. It was ever thus.

Film Star's Divorce Follows Family Row

LOS ANGELUS, July 6.—It was a dispute over acting in the movies which caused separation of Mrs. Carmel M. Kornblum, known in the film world as Carmel Myers, from her husband, Isadore B. Kornblum, according to the wife's testimony Thursday in Judge Summerfield's court, where she was granted a divorce.

"He said if I would not give up my profession he would not live with me," Miss Myers testified.

Replying to questions by her attorney, the plaintiff stated that she had an understanding with her husband before their marriage that he would not interfere with her in her profession.

Shut Up Four Years, Girl Is Dumb, Blind

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 6.—Little Mary Alexia, ten years old, was discovered in a hospital here late Thursday, where she lay dumb and blind as a result of four years' imprisonment in a dark cellar. Although the girl was released from her "prison" three years ago, hospital attendants said they had kept her case secret, out of pity for her.

The child is said to have suffered an injury to her leg near her home at Tupelo, Miss., and her confinement followed at the hands of relatives.

Population of Damascus is 450,000.
